LAME DUCK SESSION IS UNCERTAIN

No Telling What Mood Solons Will Show At Washington

INSURGENTS ISSUE

Democrats Content to Play Monopoly Role In Congress

WASHINGTON — (Special) One week from Monday the "lame duck" or left-over congress gets under way for its short and final term. No one can venture a forecast at this time as to what the congress will do. There is a very general impression that it will do little or nothing and that by its indolence it may force President Coolidge to call an extra session of the congress elected this month along about the middle of April or the first of May.

There is no way of telling as yet what the mood of the coming session will be. If the republican insurgents of senate and house still in a reclacitrant frame of mind and if the democrats continue to fraternize with them, the administration is to all intents and purposes "hog-tied" and can accomplish little or nothing.

DEMOCRATS OUTSIDE

However, there is a growing disposition on the part of the democrats to cut away from all further alliances with the "enemy." There are not a few Democrats who feel that a good bit of the lambasting they received at the last election was due to the bad company they had been keeping. The hope of victory thru an annoyance of the administration proved a will-o'-the-wisp. There is a fixed agreement already among the Democrats to be Democrats in the next congress—the one that succeeds the lame duck session—and consequently there is a growing sentiment to put this agreement into effect at once.

The Democrats are to be content with playing the role of a minority party, instead of trying to become a majority thru a coalition with the discontented elements of the grand old party.

The Democrats, while maintaining their position as "liberals" will avoid all responsibility for government when the newly elected congress is called in session. They will not be either a silent or a sullen minority. They will talk freely, as of yore, and will attempt to point out to the country the frailties and misguided purposes of their political opposites, but they will make no strenuous effort to frustrate the will of the majority.

Both Republican and Democratic caucuses are to be held during the coming week in an effort to map out a program for the short session which, beginning December 1, must end March 4. The Republicans in all the importance of their newly gained victories at the polls, are by far the more active and have the most to do. Aside from electing a senate leader to fill the shoes of the lamented Lodge, they are confronted with various important committee vacancies.

FORMULATE POLICY

By no means the smallest task of the Republicans is to formulate a policy for dealing with the so-called LaFollette group, including the leader of this group himself. Altho some of the G. O. P. stalwarts are in favor of "throwing them out," the more level heads are inclined to an olive branch attitude until such time as the insurgents show themselves to be unregenerate. Among the old line conservatives the opinion is expressed that perhaps the "radicals" will be tamer now that the election went so heavily against them; that they will come into the fold and go along as Republicans in spirit and action as well as in name.

Meantime men of liberal faith in both of the old parties are casting about to see what their position is to be. They acknowledge the breadth and length of the recent conservative victory at the polls, but they do not believe that the spirit of liberalism in American is dead.

There is little for the liberals to do at the moment, however, but to wait for the swing of the pendulum. Political winds do not blow always in one direction. This is as true of the old world as it is of the new. For this very reason some of the more far-seeing men of the republican party instead of exulting over the new

Couldn't Be In Court, Had To Kill Self

CINCINNATI — (By Associated Press) — A note stating that he could not keep an appointment to be in court because he was committing suicide, was received by an attorney, while the police were trying to solve the mystery involved in the suicide of Austin Breed, 47, president of the Crane and Breed Manufacturing Co., makers of hearses and undertaker's supplies Saturday.

Breed ended his life by drinking poison. His court appearance was to have been in answer to a suit filed by a Gerard, Kansas, firm for $14,258, which, it is claimed, is due for books sold to Breed when he was conducting a book shop. The book shop was an unfortunate business venture, but it is not believed it materially affected Breed's financial welfare to any extent.

That his suicide was premeditated was seen in the condition of his writing desk which had been thoroly gone thru, and letters sealed and personal papers filed away. He apparently had spent the night at his desk.

Breed was to have been in court Saturday for cross-examination in the litigation against him. In a note he left instructions for his funeral and gave a warning that a jug which had contained the poison which he drank be emptied on the ground because of its effect on metal.

Before ending his life Breed lighted up every room of his bachelor apartment. He carefully prepared photographs and other possessions and addressed the packages to relatives. He also wrote a letter to his banker.

RABBIT SHOW IS SCHEDULED

National Event Brings Many Exhibits to Lima

Largest rabbit show in the world, outside of one held years ago in London, opens in Lima Tuesday morning for five days at 324 W. Market-st in connection with the national convention of rabbit breeders.

One thousand entries from various states in the middle west and along the Atlantic coast have already been received, assuring a showing of between 1,000 and 3,000 rabbits, according to E. A. Enslen, show secretary. A number of rabbits have already been shipped here from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Rabbits of all species, including the half-pound Polish breed to the 20-pound Flemish Giants, will be exhibited at the show. Judging starts Tuesday morning by three nationally known rabbit breeders.

Committee in charge is composed of all Lima fanciers as follows: E. O'Keefe, president; E. A. Enslen, show secretary; V. N. Ashton, show superintendent; C. A. Phillips, secretary of the local association, and Dr. E. V. Hover, inspector.

On Saturday night the show will be wound up by a banquet to be attended by approximately 125 rabbit breeders from all sections of the country.

FOOTBALL TRAIN IS DITCHED

300 Passengers Escape When Train Leaves Track

DETROIT — (By Associated Press)—A Michigan Central football special train of nine coaches and Pullmans returning from Ann Arbor to Detroit with 1,200 persons who had attended the Michigan-Iowa football game, went into a ditch near Springwells, a suburb, at 7 o'clock tonight. So far as known, no one was injured, altho all coaches left the track, three turning over on their sides.

M. D. Strickman, fireman, Jackson, and H. W. Culp, brakeman, Detroit, were treated at a hospital for minor burns. They said they believed few, if any persons, had been hurt.

Railroad officials who made an investigation said the train was traveling at moderate speed. They were unable to tell what caused the wreck, which occurred near a culvert recently completed.

The train was composed of two cars chartered by the Detroit Athletic club, two by the Detroit club, two by the Detroit University club and three day coaches. Tracks were torn up for a distance of 50 feet.

Doctors, nurses and first aid equipment were rushed to the scene of the wreck at once, but were not needed.

Railroad officials said that the fact that the coaches and Pullmans were of steel construction accounts for there being no list of dead or injured.

OPTIMISM SHOWN IN BUSINESS

Representative Group Sees Great Year Ahead Of this City In 1925

REASONS GIVEN

General Stability of Country Will be Reflected Generally Here

Optimism concerning business in Lima during the next several months was the keynote of a number of interviews by a representative of The Lima News yesterday. Several representative business men, approached at random, unhesitatingly declared that 1925 holds more promise than any recent year.

While the general trend is upward at present, it is expected to be running at top speed early in the coming year and be of such duration as to make for a condition that will be most satisfactory from every standpoint.

Following are statements from Lima men, who are in position to forecast the future:

C. M. TOLAN,
Vice President, Lima Trust Co.

With the National Election over and the year 1924 drawing to a close, we find ourselves looking forward with a great deal of interest to the future. Everyone is anxious to know what the year 1925 holds in store for us. While it is, of course, impossible to forecast accurately the state of business on any future date, one can, by carefully studying present conditions, weighing economic barometers and by having pretty definite information as to the character of the political party in power, look behind the curtain of 1925 and draw rather definite conclusions as to the outlook for business in the coming year.

I know, of course, that we are all interested as to how Lima is to fare next year in a business way, but Lima can be no more prosperous than the nation. Therefore, we must first give our thoughts to the country as a whole.

In the first place, carloadings are running at a rate never before reached in our history. Evidently, some one must be selling this freight that is being moved and some one must be buying it. Is this not indicative that business is on the up-grade? This not only tells us of the great amount of business being done, but it is a glowing tribute to the operating efficiency of our railroads.

The iron and steel industry, which is such an important part of our modern business structure, continues to increase its operations. The average daily production of pig iron in October was 16% greater than September and 38% greater than the low level of July. Blast furnaces are operating at about 44.3% using 60% as normal. The steel industry's best customer has been the railroads and with the carrier's business increasing so rapidly, it is easy to see that they must continue to purchase new equipment and rails.

CONDITIONS IMPROVED

I think the agricultural situation is particularly interesting. The farmer has had more than his share of depression and he has had every reason to become discouraged. Therefore, it is gratifying to find the farmer now in a better condition than he has been in for years. I do not mean to say that all of the farmers' problems are solved. On the contrary, there is still much room for improvement, but I do believe that his condition is materially improving and will continue to do so.

One could go on at some length pointing out optimistic signs for our future, such as abundance of money and improving foreign situation, but I want to discuss without going into detail our local outlook.

As stated above, the railroads are enjoying prosperity and I feel that the incoming congress will encourage our great transportation system rather than retard it. Is this, then, not important to our own great Locomotive Works and our Steel Foundries? Can you not forsee the smoke of industry belching forth from the immense stacks of these plants in 1925?

It is common knowledge that the cigar business has improved materially in the last six months, so we have every reason to believe that Lima's cigar factories, of which it is justly proud, must prosper.

No industry has been harder hit in the last two years than the oil industry, but the last month has marked a considerable improvement

NEW SECRETARY

HOWARD M. GORE.

Howard M. Gore, former assistant secretary of agriculture under Henry C. Wallace, deceased, was appointed as head of the department by President Coolidge Saturday.

Gore has been acting as secretary since the death of Secretary Wallace. He will be compelled to abandon his place in the cabinet March 4, 1925, to take up the duties of governor of West Virginia to which office he recently was elected.

GAS REPORT IS AWAITED

Preliminary Hearing Held by City Saturday

Exhaustive survey of the physical valuation of properties owned by Lima Natural Gas Co. and Lima Gas Light Co. was instituted Saturday afternoon by city commissioners in connection with the proposed rate revision proposed in Lima along with the tentative $3,500,000 merger of gas companies in Lima, Wapakoneta, St. Marys and Celina.

Complete data secured by state public utilties engineers upon request of City Manager C. A. Bingham was presented at the conference of commissfoners with T. D. Pierce, utilities engineer, for complete investigation of city officials who will determine the exact valuation of the properties of the two gas companies in Lima to be used when the rate schedule is filed.

OFFICIAL REPORT

Findings of state engineers will be submitted to the utilities commission on Tuesday by Pierce and upon official tabulation a copy of the report will come to Lima for consideration of city commissioners. A maximum of only eight per cent return is allowed utilities in the adjustment of rates.

Rate revision is sought by Lima gas companies to create one uniform scale in the city, substituting for the natural and artificial gas rates now in effect.

Y. W. FUND DRIVE GOES OVER

$16,100 Collected in Five Days by Workers

The finance drive of Lima Y. W. C. A. went over the top Saturday afternoon with incomplete reports from the 90 workers showing a total collection of $16,100, or $100 more than the quota established here Monday night when the drive was officially opened at a banquet of workers.

Divisional honors for the campaign went to the division led by Mrs. H. L. Kidder with total collections of $3,193. The division in charge of Mrs. F. M. Williams reported $2,890 and Mrs. Howard Fletcher, divisional leader, turned in $2,737. The initial gift amounted to $6,972.

Team honors were won by Mrs. Siferd with $924 while the business girls' teams, in two teams, showed subscriptions of $1,651 in the campaign which opened on Tuesday morning and closed Saturday afternoon.

Ninety women comprised the workers who canvassed the city to provide the budget necessary to operate the association during the coming year. Several teams have incomplete reports and the official tabulation may increase the fund, campaign leaders announced Saturday at the completion of the campaign.

CHEST FUND MOUNTING

CLEVELAND — Figures reported at Saturday's meeting of the solicitors for the community chest show that 76 per cent of the total has been subscribed. The total is $4,375,000 and the amount already pledged is $3,361,300.

AUTOS IN COLLISION NEAR CITY

Overrunning of "Stop" Sign Cause of Other Mishap

SECOND IN DAY

Warning Issued by Chief T. A. Lanker Saturday

One girl lies at her home near Vaughnsville seriously injured and another is at City hospital badly cut and bruised, as the result of automobile accidents which occurred Saturday evening at 5 p. m. when an automobile ran over a "Stop" sign on E. Elmst and crashed into a horse and buggy, and at 6 p. m., when two autos collided headlong in the Kissing Hollow-rd, and plunged into the ditch.

Five persons were injured in the two accidents. They are:

Opal Wod, 17, of 1517 S. Main-st, scalp wounds, cuts and bruises about the face.

Lester Nelson, 1505 Greenlawnav, and H. D. Flemings, of Vaughnsville, cuts and bruises about the face.

AUTOS COLLIDE

Flemings, in company with Miss Collar, was driving west in the Kissing Hollow-rd when Sisson, driving toward Lima, crashed into the front left side of the automobile. Flemings' car skidded completely around and turned over into the ditch, burying both occupants who were removed from the wreckage in an unconscious condition by Sisson a few minutes later. Sisson is suffering from a sprained shoulder.

The Williams and Davis ambulance was called and the girl was rushed to her home near Vaughnsville, a distance of 12 miles. Flemings, who escaped with slight cuts and bruises, remained with his automobile which is practically a total wreck. Sisson's machine, when righted, was found to be only slightly damaged.

Opal Wood and Lester Wilson, who were riding in a horse and buggy in the 300 block in W. Elm-st, were thrown from the buggy to the pavement when M. W. Campbell, of 321 1-2 N. Elizabeth st, overran the "Stop" sign at Elm st and Central-av and crashed into the vehicle.

Miss Wood was removed to City hospital where her injuries were given immediate attention Wilson escaped with slight cuts and bruises.

Campbell was driving a Ford coupe, which was slightly damaged. The entire right side of the buggy was splintered by the force of the collision.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

The Saturday evening smashups brought the near-tragedy total for the past 24 hours to four.

Mrs. Hilda Overwitte, of 433 W. Grand-av, is at City hospital recovering from cuts and bruises about the face and body sutained when she was knocked to the pavement by an automobile driven by C. W. Black, of 631 W Spring-st, who ignored a "Stop" sign and struck her. An X-ray taken Saturday afternoon failed to disclose internal injuries

Alva Wierman, of 220 S. Woodlawn-av, is in the city jail awaiting arraignment Monday morning in criminal court on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, as result of an accident which occurred at 1 a. m. Saturday when his machine crashed thru the gates at the N. Main-st crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad a few seconds before a fast freight flashed past.

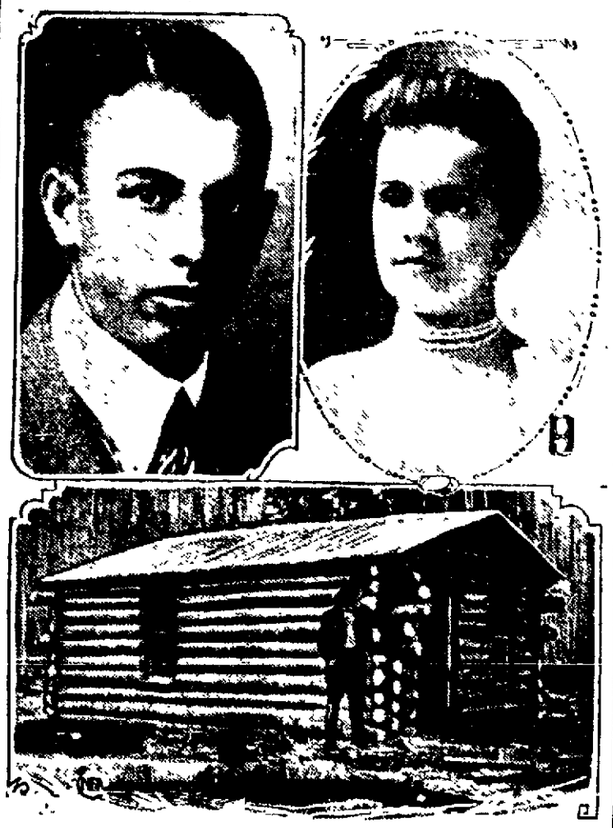

Jerry Murrell, 839 E. North-st, and George Protsman, of E. Findlay-rd, who were arrested with Wierman on drunk charges to appear as witnesses of the accident, were released on bond late Saturday to appear in court Monday.

Following Saturday's accidents, Chief of Police Lanker issued a warning to violators of the city stop ordinance. Had two automomile drivers not violated the law and laid themselves open to prosecution late Friday and Saturday, two of the near-fatalities would not have occurred, he said.

FAILS TO GO OVER

COLUMBUS — The local community fund lacked approximately $13,000 of reaching the $656,000 goal when the campaign ended. Donations yet to come in are expected to bring the total to the amount sought.

A MYSTERY OF THE NORTH WOODS

Dean Wheeler and his bride, above, went into the north woods, 70 miles from the nearest railroad, to spend their honeymoon. They came from Clearwater, Kan., but their bliss was short. While Wheeler was out cutting timber for the cabin, below, his wife was slain. Now officers are scouring Minnesota for the murderer. Robbery is believed to have been the motive since Mrs. Wheeler, reputed to be worth $100,000, carried $1,000 and wore valuable jewelry.

AUTHORITIES STILL SEEK CLUE IN FURNACE DEATH

Report of Pathologist Awaited by Prosecutor

ALIENIST IS CONSULTED

Further Questioning of Pastor and Family Indicated

COLUMBUS — (By Associated Press)—Admission that the death of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, 50, whose body practically cremated was found by her husband, the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, in the furnace of their home in the exclusive Bexley district, Monday, still presents a baffling mystery, was made today by County Prosecutor John R. King.

He expressed confidence, however, that the case eventually will be solved.

The admission was made following a conference at which King reviewed the case with those who are working with him in the attempt to establish definitely how Mrs. Sheatsley came to her death and how her body came to be in the furnace. Dr. R. C. Tarbell, an alienist, was present at the conference.

ALIENIST CONSULTED

It was the first time King had consulted an alienist in connection with the case. The prosecutor said no significance could be attached to his presence and that he merely wanted an alienist to be familiar with details of the case.

The investigation dragged today. King declared he was awaiting the complete report of Chemist C. F. Long, who last midnight, reported to the prosecutor that his analysis of blood taken from the lungs of the victim, proved to him conclusively, that she was dead when her body entered the fire bowl. No trace of carbon monoxide poisoning was found in the blood, he said, explaining that had she breathed after she entered the fire bowl, her lungs would have become filled with the poisonous fumes and the blood would have quickly absorbed it.

Intense congestion, found in the lungs, he said, points to either strangulation or suffocation.

Rev. Sheatsley Wednesday noon told Prosecutor King that he had come to the conclusion that his wife committed suicide by casting herself into the furnace after becoming violently insane. On Tuesday, he told officials, according to the prosecutor, that he believed his wife had been murdered.

REPORT AWAITED

King also is awaiting a pathological report on the condition of the lungs and sections of the aesophagus, thorax and stomach wall, which is being made by Dr. H. M. Brundage. This report may not be completed for a week or more, the prosecutor said. At the conference today, Dr. Brundage said his preliminary work had

LIFE OF B. C. FAUROT TO BE GIVEN AT MEETING

Life of B. C. Faurot, one of the pioneers of Allen-co, will be recounted in a paper to be read before the Allen-co Historical society Friday night at Memorial Hall.

This paper was written by the late D. J. Cable shortly before his death and will be read by Congressman John L. Cable at the meeting. Faurot was one of the leaders in the early development of Lima.

DRIVERS LICENSE PROPOSED

Legislature Will Be Asked to Enact Law

CLEVELAND—(By Associated Press)—A bill aiming at a sane provision in Ohio law for the licensing of automobile drivers has been drafted by the Ohio State Automobile Association and the Cleveland Automobile club and will be submitted early in the next session of the legislature, it was announced today.

The measure, which has the approval of 88 automobile clubs in the state and consequently the backing of more than 150,000 motorists, was primarily the work of Municipal Judge Lee Skeel of Cleveland, who drafted the present uniform state traffic code, and H. H. Gorman, counsel for the Cleveland Automobile club and O. S. A. A.

In brief, it provides for the issuance of a license at the nominal fee of 50 cents and designates the secretary of state as the administrative official with the aid and co-operation of city and county police officers. It is predicated on the basic law that all men are to be presumed innocent until proved guilty, from which the conclusion is reached that motorists have an inherent right to the use of roadways and one should be barred from that use only when proof is offered as to his unfitness.

PROPERTY VALUATION IS CAUSE

Schools Also to Feel Money Shortage After Jan. 1

DRAWS HELD UP

Lima Payments May Not Start Until In February

Both the city and public schools of Lima will face the new year with empty treasuries, it developed Saturday, due to the certainty that December collection of taxes will be made from four to six weeks later than usual.

It is highly probable, Harry E. Botkins, county treasurer, declared Saturday night, that neither the schools nor the city can make a draw for funds until after Feb. 1, even if collections are speeded faster than anticipated.

The gigantic task of reappraising the real estate of the city is the cause of the unusual condition. The job is nearly ended.

The work has been tedious and attempts to make it fair and equal have consumed a great deal more time than was anticipated.

"We were compelled to undertake this work," C. R. Phillips, county auditor, asserted Saturday, "because of the petition filed by Lima freeholders. It has been a big job and has taken a great deal more time than was estimated."

LATE DELIVERY

The city books, according to Botkins, will probably not be delivered to him until Jan. 1.

After they are in his hands, he said it will take several weeks to write up the receipts.

"Under the most favorable conditions," Botkins asserted, "no money from the city will be paid into this office until around Feb. 1."

Botkins at first asserted that the city and schools might not be able to obtain any money until early in March, but later declared that they might be able to make an advance draw after Feb. 20.

The December and June collections, in his opinion, will probably overlap. He predicted no let up from Jan. 1 until he retires from office in September.

Botkins declared that no one is to blame for the condition. Auditor Phillips, he said, has speeded up the task of listing and reappraising all of the property in the city, but the job has taken longer than was estimated. It was impossible to get thru in time to start collections at the usual time.

NORMAL PAYMENTS

Under normal conditions tax collections in Allen-co for the first half year, commence on or about Dec. 1. The last date for payment without penalty is Dec. 20. County commissioners, however, have always extended this limit to Jan. 20.

The money paid into the county in December is usually ample to allow various taxing districts to make an advance draw to meet bills and expenses falling due on or after the first of the year.

With money for the present year practically exhausted at the close of business Dec. 31, the schools and the city will enter the new year with empty pockets. Both may have to borrow to meet the emergency, it is believed.

The county may not be so hard hit, as it will have taxes from rural districts to draw on, provided Treasurer Botkins decides to receive the money before he commences city collections. Some of the township boards are in the hands, he said Saturday. He is undecided what to do, however.

While admitting that collections will be greatly delayed, Auditor Phillips inclined to take a more optimistic view of the situation than Botkins.

GOOD PROGRESS

"The revaluation," he declared, "is coming along all right. We are getting toward the end. Taxes can't be paid as early as usual, but I think there is no doubt that a start can be made before Jan. 1."

In making the revaluation, Phillips said, he thought it was best to get everything lined up to show what the new values are to be and then notify property owners. Notifications will be sent out by mail very soon, he said. Everyone will be given a chance to examine the new assessed value and if dissatis-

Speculation Arises Over New County Detective

With a half dozen applicants pressing their claims for appointment on the basis of services rendered, the Allen-co Republican executive committee is in for a lively session during the coming week when an attempt is made to pick an assistant prosecuting attorney and a new county detective.

By no word or gesture can C. W. Long, prosecuting attorney-elect, be made to indicate a preference. It is understood that he will let the committee do the choosing and make the appointment accordingly.

Loren Atmur, son of Minor A. Atmur, prominent member of the Lima bar, is among the applicants for assistant. His application has been filed with the committee, it was learned.

DEMANDS PRESSED

Lester Shepherd, candidate for state senator in the G. O. P. primary, Aug. 12, is another strong contender for the job. His claims for the job are being pressed vigorously, and it is understood that a portion of the committee are pledged to support him to the bitter end.

Chester Cable, brother of J. L. Cable, while not an avowed candidate, is looked upon with great favor by several of the committee, and has a large following among the rank and file of Republican voters in the city. There are several other G. O. P. attorneys skirmishing in the office waiting to make a bid for the place if the opportunity presents itself.

Selection of a county detective may prove even more complicated than picking out an assistant prosecuting attorney.

Roy O. Bowersock, incumbent who has held the job during three administrations extending over a period of more than eight years, is said to be abhorent to part of the committee, because of political reasons and at the same time is favored by others.

He was not endorsed four years ago, nor eight years ago, however, but was appointed. Bowersock refuses to commit himself as to whether or not he will go after the job again.

NO CHANGES

There are a number of others who are after the place, among them being Lou Rise, private detective and special deputy sheriff. Charley Montague, brother of J. Oscar Montague, county commissioner's clerk and one or more members past and present of the Lima police department. Several correspondence school sleuths are also applicants, according to Long.

The comittee, it is understood, will keep hands of fall other offices in the court house where terms start Jan 1. There will be no change in the personnel of Sheriff Crossen's force, unless someone resigns, or it is found necessary to employ another deputy on Account of increase in crime.

J. Oscar Montague, commissioner's clerk, and Ruth Benedum, Allentown, assistant will be reappointed to the present positions. Judge J. H. Hamilton of probate court will make no changes in his corps of attaches.

LOSS OF LIGHTS FACES DELPHOS

DELPHOS —(Special)—Coincident with the failure of the voters in the last election to favor the special tax levy for municipal purposes, to be used mostly for street lighting comes the controversy over the light franchise of the Northwestern Ohio Light Co., which was rejected at the meeting of the Delphos City Council, two weeks ago.

W. H. Shaffer, city auditor, said Saturday that the city would no doubt be in darkness after Dec. 31, as the city's debt to the light company totals more than $2,200 with no visible means of paying it off.

"The problem is indeed serious; we asked the people to help pay for the lights by a method that would mean little more than tax added to their tax duplicates and they refused leaving as the only alternative a city in darkness," Shaffer stated Saturday.

CINCINNATI — The street car parley, which has had for its main source of business for the last three months, the drawing up of a new street car franchise, was on the verge of a collapse tonight when the Cincinnati Street Railway Co. absolutely declined to accept the proposition of the citizens' fraction committee for a 7½ cent fare for the first three years of the franchise.

HEARTLESS ROBBERS TAKE VICTIMS' TROUSERS

NEW YORK — Three holdup men who invaded the lower East Side Saturday robbed four men of jewelry valued at $3,000 and $850 in money and then insured their escape by removing their victims' trousers.

The modest victims delayed so long in obtaining substitute apparel before giving the alarm that the robbers had ample time to get away.

OPENING SKIRMISHES

The opening skirmishes of the new congress will be full of interest and significance. Some of the new congress will be full of interest and significance. Some of Mr. Coolidge's advisers are suggesting that he pay but little attention to the coming session; that he withhold his own legislative program until the new congress meets, with its power to carry out his will. Whether the president will accept their advices remains to be seen.

In any event he is not going to pay a personal visit to this lame duck session. He is going to send his message down to be read by the clerks of senate and house.

MINISTER WILL REPEAT INDIAN DANCE SERVICE

NEW YORK — The Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's in the Bowerie, whose religious dance services some time ago caused a breach between him and Bishop William T. Manning, announced Saturday that the annual "Indian service" to which Bishop Manning once voiced objection, will be held in St. Mark's this afternoon.

In making his announcement Dr. Guthrie asserted that Christianity is a "dead tradition to most people and that the sole hope" of a downtown church lies in offering "the unusual thing."

BUSINESS MEN OPTIMISTIC

in this important part of Lima's business structure.

Then it, of course, naturally follows that these important arteries of commerce cannot be prosperous without making our wholesalers, jobbers, retailers, and in fact, all of our people prosperous.

With these things in mind, let us then put forth all of our efforts to make Lima a bigger and a better city, a place where we can live happily and do business with a fair profit to every one.

T. G. HARRIS,
Vice President, First American Bank & Trust Co.

Look for stability rather than boom in business altho there are some of the material evidences of boom on the way.

With our banking system more strongly equipped than ever before to furnish capital; with late statistics showing railroad earnings the best in their history; with public utilities taking on extensive programs of expansion due to more favorable regulatory laws; with labor production showing improvement due to slight unemployment, and wage earners purchasing power very high; with the farmer able to at least materially reduce his current indebtedness; and with no unfavorable political legislation ahead, we should be optimistic.

One might continue almost indefinitely with a list of occurrences in themselves trifling but in the aggregate indicative of confidence and enthusiasm for the winter and spring.

We should capitalize the upward swing of business without trying to follow to its highest point. Next year has fine business possibilities, it will be what we make it.

C. E. LYNCH,
Secretary, Allen County Savings & Loan Co.

All indications point to 1925 as a big year in all lines of business with a probability of at least three years of unprecedented prosperity. By early spring local industries will be running full force, Ford interests will have begun operations on a large scale, many new medium priced home will be built to provide for the increased population and there will be employment for every one.

During the past year money has not been nearly sufficient to meet the demand for loans but in a lesser degree this is always true in Lima; it denotes a healthy condition and applies only to growing towns. Frantic speculation seems to have subsided for a time and while the shrewd salesman will always find easy victims ready to buy the pretty gilt stock certificate upon a promise of large dividends and wealth, most people now prefer to place their money where it will be available, earn a fair interest rate and be absolutely safe. More comfort is found in sleeping on four or five per cent interest than in lying awake on ten per cent.

Prosperity means more than big business and good labor conditions; it means conservation and thrift. We cannot eat fruit from a tree if we have picked all the blossoms for bouquets; the fruit must be allowed to ripen and some of it put away for winter use. Every man whether he be the manager of a big concern or only of a saw or shovel, should put aside some part of his earnings for contingencies.

The public has gained something by experience and the coming period of prosperity will be the greatest in many years.

J. E. MORTON,
Manager, Lima Board of Commerce

We are all, more or less, believers in "signs" and of course, being tremendously human, we follow, without much forethought, the dictates of custom. And so, when six months ago we began to hear and feel rumblings of preparation for the November election, we developed dubious wonderings and an uneasiness about business as a whole, the stock market and the supply and demand for general produce. Of course we did, since it is customary for the free flow of money and commerce to be greatly hampered every four years, partly due, we admit, to the fact that the expenditure of certain monies owned all the way from the poorest individuals to the richest financial powers in our great nation, is governed by the political party in power and partly due, we know, to chronic force of habit that this is the year when business is bound to be slow. But these six months are again past history and we have been watching with much interest for "signs" upon which to predicate our opinions of business for Lima during the coming year.

There is no doubt but that the outlook is much brighter and more hopeful and we are convinced of this for several reasons: First, because the suggestions "for the good of Lima" that are now being brought to our office are more sane and possible; second, because the complaints registered are not only less numerous, but in the majority of instances more justified for when business is dull people are easily hurt and abused since apparently the whole world is against them; third, because of the quality of industrial inquiries that are being directed to us; and fourth, because we are receiving some hopeful promises of remittances in membership dues. It is not natural for us, when we get short of money, to take care of our most pressing obligations and keep life in the others with our promises to pay as soon as possible.

The whole scheme of "no business every four years" is hard to touch, because it is universal. We all know that progress and development have gone forward at stupendous speed for hundreds of years, regardless of the political party in control. Granted that political office seekers suffer with the change of power, but not business in general. And it is upon past history that we base our belief that Business Is Good today and will if the spirit and mind are optimistic and the body full of energy and good will towards the world.

Who killed Rock Bottom? We did with our optimism. Let us keep our eyes on the upward grade and pull for Better Business.

F. H. BENTZ,
Lima Builder and Realtor

While 1924 will go down in history as one of the biggest building years Lima ever saw, 1925 certainly will see a greater amount of construction than was completed this year.

There are various reasons for this statement. While the city has made great strides in the last several months toward overcoming the housing shortage that has existed here because of the rapid expansion of the city, much remains to be done along this line. With business conditions as they will be next year, more houses will have to be erected in 1925 than were built in 1924 if we are to keep up the ratio of gain toward overcoming the shortage of homes.

Money will be more plentiful and financing will be easier for the man who wants to own a moderate priced residence. This already is being reflected in the building and loans and banks and will have an important bearing on the building situation.

Another improvement I feel confident will be seen in the 1925 program will be the elimination of the cheap "shacks", built to sell quickly and with that view only on the part of the builder. The public does not want such houses and they should not be permitted to be constructed. The building business generally now is on a high plane in the city and while there may be a few exceptions, competition is making for a better class of houses and prospective buyers may feel that they are getting full value for their money when they purchase.

On the whole, 1925 should be the greatest year Lima ever knew, not only in the building business but in every other line. We have all the necessary elements for prosperity and the general upward swing will be going under full steam by the time the new year is ushered in.

GROWERS OPPOSE CUTOUT OF 1925 TOBACCO CROP

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Fifteen hundred tobacco growers, representing Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana in a called convention here today unanimously adopted a resolution declaring that abandonment of the 1925 burley crop voted at a growers' convention here a week ago, could not be put into effect without violence and other enumerated disadvantages.

Cutting out of the crop would also mean driving the industry from the burley district, impoverishment of growers and a general financial pinch, the convention decided, in placing itself against the cutout measure.

A motion by Lester J. Eter, member of the legislature that the "cut-out previously called be declared off" was passed unanimously.

U. S. MAY QUIT DRUG PARLEY

America Stands Firm on Opium Prohibition

CHINA AND JAPAN ARGUE

Held Impossible to Limit Trade In Norcotics

GENEVA—(By United Press)—The American delegation, supported by those of China and Japan threatened Saturday to withdraw from the international conference for suppression of traffic ir drugs, unless reservations in connection with the parleys program were accepted. A bitter fight developed at the plenary session when the steering committee presented a program limiting the scope of the conference.

Inasmuch as the recent opium conference failed to take measures to reduce or wipe out production of the commodity, Congressman Porter of America insisted the present parley was entitled to take up the question.

It is impossible, Porter, who heads the American delegation, maintained, to limit the production of and traffic in narcotic drugs as long as the immediate production of prepared opium for smoking purposes in Pacific countries is permitted.

Other countries opposed the United States spokesman, insisting that the League of Nations having entrusted the question of reducing opium smoking to the first conference, the second conference must limit its scope to the agenda, which does not include prepared opium for smoking on its list of things to be restricted.

Porter finally accepted the program with the reservation that he could bring up the question of prepared opium later. He said his delegation had been so instructed and that unless they were able to do so, the Americans could not continue to participate in the conference.

China and Japan supported the American position.

Turkey Dinner To Cost Less This Holiday

Thanksgiving dinners this year, tho expensive, will not involve near the cost that the average repast entailed last year. With turkeys selling for nearly 20 cents the pound less and duck, goose and chicken all lower than they were a year ago, the initial expense of the turkey day meal is greatly reduced.

The average meal for the famil yof five persons will cost within a few cents either way of $8, according to computations made Saturday by Frank Schenk, of the Thomas Grocery, W. Market-st.

Following is the Thanksgiving menu which is generally followed by nearly every housewife and the cost of each vegetable used in making up the meal:

Turkey, 10 pounds, $5.70; mincemeat, 35 cents; sweet potatoes, 25 cents; Irish potatoes, 7 cents; cranberries, 18 cents; bread, 1 0ecnts; butter 50 cents, coffee, 50 cents; lettuce, 25 cents.

Celery, 15 cents, may be used in place of letture; fruit cake $1, or plum pudding 50 cents, may be used in place of mincemeat for pie; ice-cream, 60 cents, may replace the pie.

Chicken, 32 cents, duck, 38 cents and goose, 35 cents, may replace turkey.

$350,000 CHURCH DEDICATION THURSDA

BISHOPS TO CELEBRATE IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES

Consecration Exercises Wednesday Morning—First Priest of Parish to Assist—Edifice Is Among Finest Churches In Catholic Diocese of Toledo

Beautiful and impressive ceremonies with the pomp and sacred splendor characterization of religious ceremonies in Roman Catholic churches will mark the consecration and dedication next Wednesday and Thursday of the new $350,000 church on S. Main-st of St. John's parish, a monument to the untiring efforts of the 600 families in the congregation.

Dignataries of the Toledo diocese, to which St. John's church belongs, assisted by priests from practically every parish in towns in northwestern Ohio, will have charge of the services on the two days.

Opening ceremonies start Wednesday with Rt. Rev. S. A. Stritch, D. D., Bishop of Toledo diocese, consecrating the main altar of the imposing edifice, while at the same time Rt. Rev. August J. Schwertner, D. D., Bishop of Wichita, Kansas, consecrates one of the two side altars, leaving one altar for entire consecration of the church. Eighteen priests are to act as assistants at the consecration, beginning at 9 a. m.

Dedication of the church, scheduled for 10 a. m. Thursday, has been bestowed upon Bishop Schwertner, who in his priesthood had charge of St. John's parish when it was in its infancy. A pontifical high mass is to be celebrated by Bishop Schwertner, assisted by Rev. Frederick Rupert, of St. John's church, Delphos, the founder of St. John's parish in Lima.

Bishop Stritch, of Toledo, is to deliver the sermon, while a special choir of 60 voices, under direction of Max Falk, Sr., has been organized to sing at the pontifical mass to be said in honor of St. Anthony. In the choir there will be 25 men and 35 boys, the boys under direction of Sister Louise-Cecilia with Agnes DeCurtin as organist.

Following the pontifical mass and dedication sermon by Bishop Stricht, the hundreds of visiting priests and worshippers, in addition to the congregation responsible for the imposing edifice which stands as the outstanding architecture in South Lima, are to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner in the school auditorium adjoining the new church.

GROWTH OF PARISH

Growth of St. John's parish from a congregation of 16 families to one of over 600 families, comprises one of the outstanding epochs in the diocese of Toledo and reflects credit to the growth and prosperity of Lima.

Years ago, back in 1901 when Bishop Horshmann presided over this diocese, St. John's parish was organized with Rev. Frederick Rupert as the first priest. The beginning was humble, 16 families comprising the congregation.

A home for worship was lacking. Rev. Rupert secured the third floor of the Wheeler building, southeast corner of Market and Elizabeth-sts, to conduct religious services. An altar on wheels was used. It was wheeled to the center of the floor for services and at the conclusion wheeled to a corner of the building. The first mass was celebrated on June 30, 1901.

With a dream for a church the congregation organized and appointed a board of directors composed of Thomas Phalen, Henry J. Simons, J. J. Malloy, and S. J. Danaher in addition to a building committee of John Seifried, Andrew DeCurtin, Edward King and Cornelius McAuliffe.

Plans for a combination church and school were formulated and on July 27 with the award of a contract for $14,000 the inception of St. John's church and school was a conception. The building was constructed in record time.

Bishop Horshmann delivered the sermon at the cornerstone laying with special services at Wheeler hall. In connection with the sermon the bishop asked the entire diocese of Toledo to unite in prayer for President McKinley, who had been shot the previous week.

When the cornerstone was laid a sealed box was placed in it containing a copy of the Catholic Universe, a Catholic magazine, a copy of the Times-Democrat, a copy of the Stimmes der Wahrheit, four written messages, one by the bishop, one by the pastor of the church, one by the secretary of Division 2, A. O. H., and the fourth by George Feltz, county auditor of Allen-co, at that time. Shortly afterward thieves broke into the box after the contents.

SCHOOL OPENED

Dedication services at the church took place on Dec. 1, just one week after the blessing of the bell, marking the opening of the church and combination school to the congregation. On Dec. 27 four sisters from Cincinnati arrived in Lima to take charge of the school, which at that time had an enrollment of 160 students. No home was provided by the parish for the sisters and they lived at 120 E. Vine-st.

School opened on Jan. 2, 1902, with 114 pupils. Shortly afterwards the enrollment increased to 190 students. On March 22 in a letter sent to Lima the bishop of the diocese officially divided St. Rose and St. John's parishes, making the center line of Market-st as the dividing line, a boundary which exist. today.

Within the few succeeding months after the formal opening of the church and school the first class took holy communion with 40 children in the class and on Sept. 14 and 15 the first 40 hours devotions were held at the church.

With the steady growth of the congregation need of expansion was realized and on Sept. 17, 1902, ground was broken for the pastoral home, which was completed on April 29, 1903. On Oct. 29, 1903, the first class was confirmed at the church and numbered 117 children who took the sacrament.

After six years of service in the religious, educational and moral development of the parish, Rev. Rupert was relieved from the parish and succeeded by Rev. August J. Schwertner, who is now bishop of Wichita, Kansas, diocese.

The parish progressed during the following three years and in 1910 with the rapid growth a dream of a larger church was first aired among the congregation along with the first graduation class from the St. John's High school which had been formed three years previous. On Oct. 22, 1910, a building committee headed by Rev. Schwertner was formed and was composed of H. S. Simons, W. H. Rushing J. J. Malloy, Patrick Carney, Max Falk, A. M. Fruckel, V. Cardosi, Richard Tobin and John Finley. The following year ground for the new edifice was purchased.

GROUND BROKEN

While efforts were exerted by the congregation for a new church, the duties in the parish grew too strenuous for Rev. Schwertner and Rev. K. J. Alter was appointed assistant, the first assistant in the parish, but was succeeded two years later by Rev. C. A. Buettel. In 1911 the basement for the new church was dug but further construction was stopped until nearly 10 years afterwards.

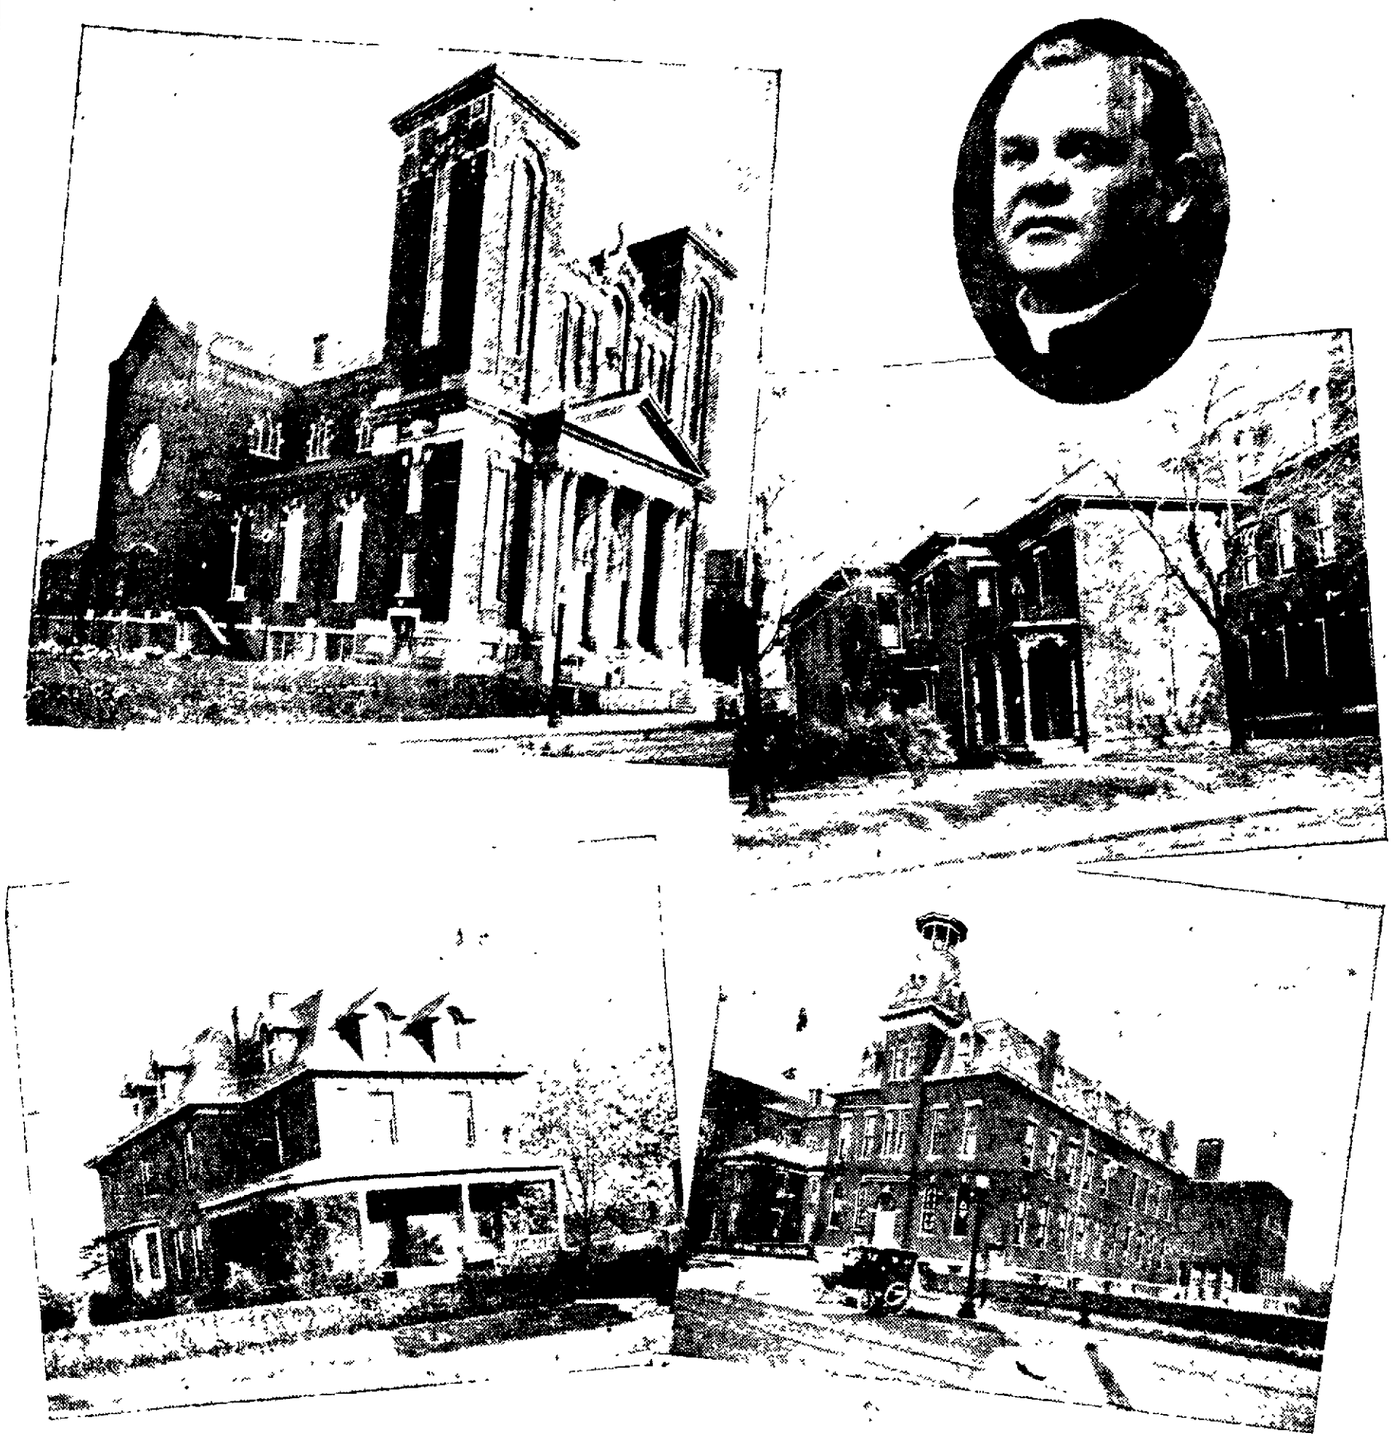

In the years that followed the congregation grew with the growth of the city and necessity for a larger church grew more pressing. The congregation arose with spirit and in financial drives and church functions the necessary building fund was subscribed.

On Feb. 7, 1920, Rev. Leonard Plumanns was appointed pastor of St. John's church and acted as a dominating factor in the erection of the new church, along with his assistant, Rev. Albert Pessifall, both of whom are with the congregation and join with the parishioners in the joy and pride over the new church, which is one of the outstanding religious edifices not only in Allen-co, but in this diocese.

Actual construction of the church was started in July, 1922, and nearly two years and five months were consumed in its construction under direct supervision of Andrew DeCurtin, architect, who is a member of the congregation and one of the original members of the building committee.

In the twenty-three years existence of St. John's parish, which was named in honor of St. John the Evangelist, the growth has been one of the outstanding events in Toledo diocese. From a congregation consisting of a handfull of 16 families the parish grew with leaps and bounds and today over 600 families of active members are included on the rolls of the church while the school boasts of an elementary system and a high school division of nearly 600 students, all under the direction of Rev. Plumanns and his assistant, Rev. Pessifall.

PARISH MEMBERS AID CHURCH

Costly Decorations, Windows in Edifice Donated

Interior decorations in St. John' church, S. Main-st, which will be dedicated here Thursday morning, have been realized thru the generosity of the members of the congregation and other devout Catholic interested in the beautiful $350,000 church.

On the altars at the side of the main altar in the church the gift have been placed. On the Blessed Virgin altar a coronation has been donated by Rt. Rev. August J. Schwertner, Bishop of Wichita, Kansas, who was pastor here from 1907 to 1913.

On the St. Joseph altar opposite the Blessed Virgin altar a statue depicting the death of St. Joseph is the gift of the Plumann family. Rev. Leonard Plumanns is pastor of the church.

The windows of stained glass are donations of various members of the congregation. The window showing "The Draught of Fishes", by Lawrence and Mary Phalen; second north window, "Gethsemani", Joseph and Elizabeth Fouche, third window on north, "John and Peter at Sepulchre", memory of Michael and Catherine Mooney; second window on south, "John and Mary", Dan E. Simons family; third window on south, "Farewell to John", memory of Anna and Bernadine Hoover.

The large rose windows on the north and south side are the gifts of the Altar society and the C. J. McCune family. The upper windows on the north side have been donated by the Edward Quinlan family; J. Sullivan family, memory of Ralph Finckh, Binder family, Patrick Brun family, Peter C. Beck family.

On the south side the windows are gifts of Mary M. Kane, Frank E. Duffy family, the C. O. O. F., L. C. B. A. branch, No. 994, Timothy Downey family and the Michael Burns family.

Many other gifts such as candlesticks for the altars, statues, altar railings, sanctuary lamps, scantus chimes, crucifix and small candleholders were donated by other members of the congregation.

25.00 WILL HOLD ANY LOT IN WESTWOOD UNTIL JAN. 10TH.

ANNIVERSARY OF CHURCH

Twenty-fourth anniversary of the birth of St. John's Roman Catholic church will be celebrated here next June. The parish was created with the appointment on June 30, 1901, of Rev. Frederick Rupert as the first priest.

First mass in the parish was celebrated on June 30, 1901, in a temporary church located in the Wheeler-blk., southeast corner of Market and Elizabeth-sts by Rev. Rupert. In contrast to the beautiful altar in the $350,000 church to be consecrated and dedicated Wednesday and Thursday the mass was said on an altar on wheels which was pushed to the center of the floor during services and at the end of services it was returned to a corner of the room located on the third floor of the building.

SERVICES HELD IN BASEMENT

St. John's Catholic parish, comprising all members south of the center line of Market-st, has the distinction of being one of the very few congregations to attend services in a church basement.

The basement for the new $350,000 church was finished several years ago and while work on the remainder of the building was in progress services were held daily in the basement of the church by Rev. Leonard Plumanns and his assistant, Rev. Albert Pessifall.

With the consecration Wednesday and the dedication Thursday of the new structure, the basement of worship will be a procedure of the past, according to Rev. Plumanns who announced that he is glad to get out of the basement.

BISHOP - PRIEST ARE HONORED

Former Pastors at St. John's to Officiate at Mass

When Bishop August J. Schwertner, of Wichita, Kansas, diocese, and Rev. Frederick Rupert, pastor of St. John's church, Delphos, return to Lima Wednesday morning for the two days celebration at the consecration and dedication of St. John's church on S. Main-st, they will be greeted by a number of the original members of the parish formed in 1901.

Rev. Rupert is the founder of St. John's parish. Shortly after Bishop Horshmann, who was then in charge of Toledo diocese, created the parish Rev. Rupert was placed in charge. He arrived in the city and started the parish that is now enjoying the pleasure of dedicating a new $350,000 church.

Rev. Rupert was without a church in which to conduct services when he arrived in Lima. He secured the third floor of the Weeler building, southeast corner of Market and Elizabeth-sts, and conducted his services there with six families as active members of the congregation. A movable altar on wheels was used so that it could be pushed in a corner at the culmination of services.

When Rev. Rupert left Lima he was succeeded by Rev. August J. Schwertner, whose years of labor saw the erection of a new school and church combined, a pastoral home and a decided increase in the congregation. Both priests labored hard in the religious, educational and moral development of the parishoners and as a reward for their efforts, Bishop Schwertner is to say the pontifical high mass at the dedication Thursday with Rev. Rupert as his first assistant.

SCOUTS MENDING OLD TOYS

Workshop on Market-st Busy as Xmas Cheer Begins

MORE GIFTS NEEDED

Poor Kiddies of City to Get Presents This Season

Preparatory work in repairing old toys donated to Lima Boy Scouts last week by various homes was begun Saturday in the workshop located at 117 W. Market-st, Joseph M. Butcher, scout executive, announces.

The toys, after having been repaired, will be stored away and given to poor children on Christmas.

Groups of Scouts worked all day Saturday moving toys from the store room in the basement of their headquarters on N. Elizabeth-st to the workshop, where other groups were busy putting in work benches and getting things in shape for the actual work of repairing and repainting, which will begin Monday. Other boys sorted and marked the toys to be repaired, those that needed part sand tore apart badly damaged toys to salvage parts to be used in repair work.

TOYS WANTED

The room to be used as a workshop was secured by a committee of the Lima Boy Scout Council thru the courtesy of the Lima Trust Co. Scouts will give up the room to other organizations that wish to use it between now and Christmas for different purposes

Responses to the appeal for broken and discarded toys has been unusually generous, Butcher says. However, it is expected that the demand this year will be greater than last and in order to make more poor children happy by receiving these free presents, the Scouts are asking for more old, broken and discarded toys. Anyone having any to donate to this worthy cause should call Main 1227. Scout Headquarters, and a Scout will call at the house for the playthings.

TO TESTIFY

James E Morton, manager of the Lima Board of Commerce, will leave for Columbus Tuesday morning to appear against two men, whose cases are scheduled for hearing before the state division of securities Tuesday afternoon.

INDUSTRY GETS IMPETUS

Loco Works Cleaning up Orders Now Being Filed

That business among Lima industries is rapidly picking up is evidenced by the fact that several plants are contemplating the addition of more men to their working forces soon, and another is regularly making additions with the receipt of new orders.

Following the receipt from the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad of an order for ten new locomotives last Monday, the Locomotive Works has made several additions to their working force in an effort to rush to final completion orders for nearly 50 locomotives which have been on hand for some time.

Altho they are not as yet prepared to begin on the new railroad order, which is booked for delivery Jan. 1, work is being pushed in all departments of the plant in preparation to start on the new order within 10 days, W. L. Reid, president, said Saturday.

The prospective contract for the installation of new asphalt plants in Los Angeles at a cost of $100,000, which officials of the East Iron Works were dickering for up to several days ago, has not yet been signed, altho negotiations have been practically completed, according to officials of the plant.

OUT OF CITY

G. C. Mosher of the Iron works is out of the city making final arrangements for the signing of the contract, it was learned Saturday.

Altho no new orders have been received since election time by either the Gramm-Bernstein or the Garford Motor Truck Co., new prospects are appearing daily, and prospective orders, both local and foreign, will soon be pouring in, is the opinion of B A. Gramm and officials at the Garford plant

Motor truck business during November is making rapid leaps ahead of the average amount of work turned out at this time last month, and a prosperous year is looked forward to by leading stockholders of both concerns

For 1924 the Lima Locomotive Co., it is expected, will show earnings of $1,500,000, or $7 a share. Last year it earned $2,402,605, or $11 23 a share Its working capital is now $7,500,000, as compared with $6,382,580 at the close of last year. This amount is ample to carry the corporation thru all its periods without borrowing.

THE LIMA SUNDAY NEWS

Published every Sunday morning in The Lima News Building, 121 E. High-st, Lima, O. Entered as second class matter June 8, 1924, at he postoffice, Lima, Ohio, under Act of March 3, 1879

EARL R. LEACH, Managing Editor. By Mail, one year, $2.50. Single Copy, 5c

Business Conditions

There are men, supposedly business men, who go into bankruptcy in the heighth of national prosperity. There are concerns, dreamily managed, with the rainbow just beyond reach, but whose bank accounts are always in the red, in fair weather or bad. Which is introductory, to national business conditions as they exist today, on the eve of another period of great prosperity.

There will be failures during the next four years, but the sound business enterprise, factory, or mercantile house is entering on a broad expansion, with greater volume of sales, and fair margin of profit. The stock market continues to reflect this expectation, the bond market shows there are millions for investment which have been held back. Good bonds now are conspicuous by their absence, except at premiums.

Lima, largely a railroad town, must prosper with the increased earnings of the rails. The rails have led this market, and the many mergers in the making, will bring about large equipment orders. According to the Railway Age, only 19 locomotives were ordered the past week, and the year has been one of poor volume, which indicates that next year should bring record breaking tonnages.

While live stock and grain markets eased at the week end, produce generally advanced. Eggs are around 60c which is in the metropolitan markets, and poultry in the localities. Locally, retail trade took on a more snappy appearance during the week, and there was good movement in heavies. Furniture is also in strong demand.

Building continues to expand, despite the waning season. There seems no end to home construction, while apartment building has slumped. Real estate is active, with sales of vacant lots still the feature.

Money is in good demand at banks, and fair supply; while Building & Loans are getting ready for Christmas club payments. A large Chicago dry goods wholesaler reports distribution exceeding last year, and more customers in market.

The estimated census of Lima does not include a goodly population which is just outside the corporate limits, but as much a part of Lima as the public square itself. The buying power here, with suburban towns, is fully up to a city of 75,000.

Speed Up Assessments

Many property owners whose streets have been paved for several months, in some instances well over a year, wonder when they will get their assessments and how much they will be. We have in mind one street on which the paving has been completed 11 months and the assessing board has not made a report and another on which the work has been completed well over a year and the assessing board has just been named. These prove the general rule and not the exception.

The delay would not be so serious since it is human nature to put off things of this kind as long as possible were it not for the fact that property owners are compelled to pay interest on the entire amount from the time the work is completed until the details go thru the red tape and owners can pay their share or start whittling down the principal.

Since the matter of assessments is largely one to be handled thru the engineering department of the city, for it is there that the figuring is done, this department should launch into the work with a vim since the outside work is nearing completion.

We are not convinced that it is good business for the property owner to have the city issue two year notes for special improvements on which the owner must pay the interest and then permit the assessment to drag along until the notes are due. It would mean a great deal of money in the pockets of the people if assessments could be figured and announced and then placed on the tax duplicate for collection within at least six months after the improvement is completed. It would mean that this length of time should be ample for the details to be worked out.

Make A Will

Wills are the most interesting and human of all documents. A will lays bare the real character and mentality of its maker. When a man sits down with his lawyer and frames the communication that is not to be opened and read until the grave has claimed him he occasionally displays deep wisdom and even a stroke of genius.

We have in mind the late Max Benjamin of Brooklyn, N. Y. He bequeathed to his son a considerable fortune in worldly goods, then indicated that he considered a legacy of advice quite as valuable as a bequest of money:

"It is my wish that he marry only one of his faith, and that he marry before he is 30. I direct also that he invest $15,000 in a business, preferably in the drug line, and that he always be in a business from which he can earn the necessities and possibly the luxuries of life. I warn him not to neglect his health and to take a vacation summer and winter. He is to invest $50,000 in real estate income property—and to hold the same as an investment and not as a speculation."

Every father should make a will, even if he has not a dollar's worth of property. That which you have learned thru bitter experience should be summed up in writing. No legacy could be more valuable.

A failure, in particular, should make a will, to it he should tell why he did not succeed. If he has really found the reason and can indelibly impress it on his son, it may be a fortune in disguise.

The greatest thing we get out of life is experience. And it is a grave mistake to let that experience be buried with us instead of passing it along, together with our interpretation of what this strange journey called life really means.

After all, property or insurance is the least important of the things we can will to our children. The memory of a happy home, of parents to be revered, and a childhood spent in a healthful environment—these are legacies beyond price. So is an education, also wise guidance.

Capital Punishment

Eight states have abolished the death penalty. Eight retain it as an "only penalty." Thirty-two put it up to the judge or jury—the choice of death or imprisonment.

Whether individuals like it or not, the drift unquestionably is toward doing away with capital punishment all over the country. The death penalty is the most outstanding survival of barbarism. It has been the natural answer to another form of barbarism—murder.

In Wisconsin a jury found a negro guilty of first degree murder. He is a free man now, saved by another negro's confession that he committed the crime.

How many similar mistakes have been made without the innocent victim being saved from gallows or electric chair?

It is almost inconceivable that a civilized people will tolerate such a state of affairs.

Sugar Stimulant

Sugar was fed to Yale's soccer team to increase the physical energy of the players. The purpose was mainly to verify the theory that depletion of the supply of sugar in the blood is what causes exhaustion of athletes. Professors say, results were "noticable but not convincing."

Maybe we are gliding into the time when athletes will be laboratory products, medicated before contests. Skill and stamina count more than brute strength, however, and these are beyond the reach of the chemist.

SEVEN-LEAGUE BOOTS

BUSINESS BOOM STARTING

GOOD times are returning far pocketbooks for everybody. A business boom is under way. Many conservative bankers and industrial leaders are even predicting that ahead lies prosperity such as this country never before knew except in the boom that followed the World War. Maybe they are expecting too much. But all signs point to a tremendous revival of trade.

The stock market for several months has been betting on a coming business boom. Recently, sales of stocks and bonds on the New York Stock Exchange exceeded all previous records, with average prices of securities the highest in eight years.

Individual speculators frequently guess wrongly. But the market itself never does. It anticipates general business conditions by a period of from four to six months—rising ahead of booms, collapsing ahead of hard times.

Last summer the iron and steel industry stagnated. Its production sagged to about half of mill capacity. But now the output is rising swiftly. In October the nation's production of pig iron was 2,477,127 tons, compared with only 1,784,899 tons in July.

This rate of gain, continued, would find the steel industry running full blast and top speed by spring. Indications are that there'll be no letup in recovery.

Railroads have been moving record-breaking amounts of freight. Since early in September, shippers have loaded more than a million cars of freight a week. When times are dull and no relief in sight, car loadings fall as low as 640,000 cars a week.

Compare that with a million a week! Business men do not buy the goods represented in freight unless they expect buyers.

In October, average wholesale prices went up one and a half per cent, announces Dun's organization. It now takes $194 in the wholesale markets to buy what cost $184 six months ago. The price of prosperity is higher prices. Few care, as long as they have the "jack."

$ $ $

This coming business boom brings you another opportunity to get rich—or, at least, better yourself. To the majority of the population, a period of prosperity merely means more money to spend. A minority sees it as a chance to save and get ahead. Trees are most heavily laden with nuts just before a severe winter. Be a squirrel.

LIMA NEWS HEALTH SERVICE

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY

NO BEDY, MUCH MEDY

Disorders of the nervous system are certainly much increased if they are not caused by late hours. Neuropathic children are found chiefly in neurotic families, and among the wrong living habits of such families is the habit of being up late nights. This may not mean so much for the full grown adult, but no child can be healthy and strong who is a borrower of the night. In cities and towns it is no uncommon thing to see parents of limited intelligence carrying infants if a tender age about with them on unnecessary visits to shops or shows long after sunset—deliberately robbing the helpless babies of the rest and sleep which is so vitally important. It is sad to think of the fate of such children. Their parents are neurotic, ignorant or indifferent about the ways of health or right living, quick to resort to dope to quiet the natural protests of the children against such improper care, and so the children get a bad start in life—is it any wonder so many go wrong? In one such instance the defective parents—who nevertheless kept up a certain degree of social life and considered themselves respectable people—constantly fed a young baby paregoric and professed surprise when the doctor discovered the cruelty and told them the child had the opium habit.

What time is bed time for a normal child? Well, of course, that depends on the amount of sleep the child requires. Some children require more than others, but the minimum amount consistent with health, normal growth and development is as follows:

Sleep Ration

For an infant 3 months old 18 hrs.
For an infant 6 months old 16 hrs.
For an infant 1 year old 15 hrs.
For an infant 2 years old 14 hrs.
For a child 4 years old .. 12 hrs.

A normal healthy infant sleeps from 20 to 22 hours out of 24 in the first few weeks of life, waking only from hunger, pain, cold or wet. A baby a year old should have the sleep ration in three portions, the main part at night, but in addition a forenoon nap and an afternoon nap, each nap about one and one-half hours in duration.

The daily nap habit should be carefully inculcated by the mother when the infant is young, and at least the afternoon nap should be adhered to until the child is old enough to enter school. For a child 3 years of age an afternoon nap of from half an hour to an hour is usually sufficient. Another habit which the wise mother endeavors to establish is the habit of going to bedy at night without any ceremony. At bedy time let the child be undressed, perhaps bathed, put in nighty and tucked in bedy, in a quiet room without a lamp, and nuff said. Neurotic, neuropathic, miserable, unhappy and undeserving of sympathy is the household where bed time is a thing dreaded by all hands.

Bed time for any infant under a year old is 5 o'clock in the afternoon. For infants under 2 years, 6 o'clock. For children under 6 years, 7 o'clock. For children under 10 years, 8 o'clock. For children under 16, 9 o'clock in winter and 10 o'clock in vacation time.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Bad Odors Constitute a Nuisance

In an apartment house the door leading to the cellar from the main hall is constantly open, and odors, from garbage and pools of water on the floor of the cellar come up thru the halls. Could this affect the health of the tenants? The door I speak of is of metal for fire protection. (R. S. B.)

Answer—Any unpleasant odor may impair the health of a sensitive person, but in the sanitary sense such odors can produce no disease. In any case, perhaps you have just complaint about improper disposal of garbage—a complaint to be made to your health department, I suppose. If the door is a fire door it should be kept shut—there is another possible remedy in a complaint to the chief of the fire department. Sanitary laws or rules vary in different communities in regard to such foul odors.

Iced Pudding

Is ice cream good for children in cold weather? Isn't there some danger of chilling the body? (Anxious Mother).

Answer—There is no such danger. It is no worse for children in cold weather than in warm weather. The stuff so called nowadays is not cream unless you have a very flexible imagination. It is mainly glucose, corn starch, gelatin and maybe a dash of some powdered milk preparation. So called ice cream is no longer a health food, in my opinion, tho it is just as nutritious as substances used in making it.

Prunes, Figs, Raisins and Senna

I have been making a mixture of prunes, figs, raisins and senna leaves, chopped fine, and taking a small "chew" of the paste every night. Is this a harmful habit and is the senna absorbed by the system? (B. G.)

Answer—The habitual use of senna leaves is perhaps less harmful than most of the "vegetable" or herb physics which are popularly taken in that way. The fruits in your recipe are fine. The senna is absorbed, and in part must be eliminated thru the kidneys. But why cultivate the physic habit?

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

PERSONALITY

You may know just as much as the other man knows,
You may go just as far as the other man goes,
You may be just as strong, just as clever, as true,
Yet somehow or other he wins over you;
And you cannot see
Why this difference should be,
When you know in your heart
You're as able as he.

The difference is not in the things which you know,
It is not in the skill or the force of your blow,
It is not in the work you are able to do,
It's in that personality labeled as "you";
The thing you don't see,
Is the manner which he
Always at his best
Makes the effort to be.

He is keen and alert, with a light in his eye,
A smile and a word for all men who pass by,
He wins their affection and values it, too,
He makes his life stand out, and just so could you;
But you scowl and you sight
And when strangers are nigh
There's no warmth in your grip
And no light in your eye.

It is not what you know which will carry you far,
It's not what you can do, but it is what you are,
Improve your mind? Yes, with the books on the shelf,
But give time and thought to improving yourself;
Make the effort and plan
To be that sort of man
Which the world loves to honor
Whenever it can.

SKATING PONDS FOR KIDDIES

Owners Asked to Provide Low Lots for Flooding

MACK BACKS PROJECT

City to Provide Water for Artificial Rinks

Announcement that the fire department will provide an ice-pond for the convenience of the kiddies and other skaters of the city, was made late Saturday by Fire Chief John Mack.

Mack requested that any property owner who has a low lot or field located within the city limits which will be available for this purpose, notify him at Central fire station.

Within a few days, or as soon as the weather grows cold enough, the field will be flooded in the evening and left to freeze.

LOW LAND SOUGHT

This plan has been carried out in many other cities, according to fire department officials, but has not in the last few years been attempted in Lima owing to the scarcity of water in the city water reserve.

At present there is enough water in the reservoirs to last 10 months without additional waterfall and no water famine is expected. Following the gleaning of this information came Mack's announcement.

Fire departments in various cities in providing frozen skating prospects do so only where small ponds which are shallow enough to freeze at zero temperature are unknown.

Mack's idea is to furnish a thin sheet of ice which will permit skating and at the same time will not be in the form of a hazard to the small kiddies of the city.

Larger streams and lakes throughout the city will not freeze until the mercury has gone considerably below the zero mark, and even then are extremely dangerous, especially to children who are unable to swim.

Butcher Gives Views On Meat Doping Charge

Editor The Lima News:

Since I believe it is the unfailing policy of The News to be fair at all times to all I wish to call your attention to an article published in your issue of Tuesday, Nov. 18 which has done a most grave injustice to my business. The article declares that "state opens war here on meat 'dopers' and that 'one butcher is fined $25.' The article also declares that 'wholesale arrests are threatened' that "sulphites are used" and that chemicals are poisonous, pickers declare."

I am the butcher who was fined. The fine was levied on a plea of guilty to having exposed for sale hamburger steak a sample of which was taken by state inspectors Oct. 16, and which it was charged contained a small quantity of sulphite. The affidavit to which I pleaded guilty said nothing whatever about the hamburger containing poison and there was not one word of testimony, not a single inference in the case, that sulphite is poisonous or that any other poison was contained in the meat.

As a matter of fact, the hamburger which the state alleged contained the sulphite was exposed for sale in my absence from my place of business in the High Street market. I have never in all my experience in the handling of meats used a single adulterant, not a particle of drug, chemical or other preservative. I purchase only the finest meat obtainable and dispose of the same quickly that it is not necessary to use lubricants or preservatives even tho I were so inclined to use.

The sulphite the state alleged to have found in the hamburger could have been placed there only in the refrigerator unground, by the firm from whom I purchased the cut. My business has been stricken from the books and not one order has been placed since the 16th of October. I will any further business transacted with it by me.

I employe in charge of the market during my absence is no longer connected with my place of business.

Referring to the use of the word "poison" in connection with "sulphite" I beg to call your attention to the fact that sulphites, tho illegal as coloring, or preserving meat in Ohio, are permissible in more than half of the states of the union, by many of the highest food authorities in the world declare that sulphite is in no wise whatever deleterious, nor harmful.

In justice and fairness I request that you publish this statement in full.

L. J. MAEY.

"NEW POOR" IS SOUTH PLAY

Ye Merrie Players Start Work On Christmas Drama

SCHOOLS CLUBS ARE BUSY

Activities for Week Retold In Review

A special meeting of the Ye Merrie Players, the dramatic club of South High school was held Monday after school. Miss Helen Meredith, the club supervisor, announced that tryouts for the play, "The New Poor," would be held that week.

As a result of the try-outs the following cast has been selected for the play by Miss Meredith who was assisted by Miss S. Roese. The part of the Grand Duke will be played by Eugene Kaliher; Count Ivan, by Harold Bresler; Prince Bladenmir, Earl Benson; Princess Irina, Lillian Grieenbaum; Amos Wellby, Howard Robinson; Miller Gutteridge, George Mowry; Mrs. Wellby, Katherine Cheney; Alice Wellby, Gertrude Ernst; Constance Wellby, Betty Stockton; Betty Wellby, Katherine Gilmore; Jay Maxwell Mundsley, Elizabeth Karthauser; and Kirk O'Farrell, Harry Roeder. A substitute cast will be announced Monday. The first practice for the play was held Friday.

The play will dedicate the new auditorium at South, and will be given some time in December. The exact date has not been set, since the time of the completing of the auditorium is rather uncertain.

At the last meeting of the Science club a revised constitution was adopted. It was decided that hereafter the club will be known as "The Edison Science Club of South High." Next Tuesday, Robert Mason will demonstrate the tesla spark coil, an interesting phenomena of today. G. Maxfield will also deliver an illustrated lecture on "Milk Distribution," which was postponed to this week.

The Senior Hi Y met Wednesday evening under the supervision of G. Maxfield. Before the lesson R. T. Veal made an announcement about the Older Boys convention at Mansfield. Veal wanted eight boys from the South Senior Hi Y to represent the club at that city. The boys who will go will leave Lima early Friday morning, following Thanksgiving. They will be back in Lima late Sunday night. The purpose of the convention is to bring together boys and young men to discuss the question of practical Christian Living. After Veal's announcement Maxfield gave the lesson on the topic of "Leadership," following which the club adjourned.

The Junior Hi Y. of South met with the Juniors of Central for a combined meeting Wednesday evening. R. T. Veal gave a short talk on the subject, "Staying in School." The meeting adjourned rather early because a number of Central's lecture course was to be given that evening.

The Debate club met Tuesday under the supervision of Miss M. Bowlus. Short speeches were given by members of the club, to accustom themselves to speaking in public. The next meeting will be held Tuesday, Dec. 2, at which time a debate will be given by members of the club. The question of debate has not been decided upon up to this time, but the members will be notified in ample time for the debate.

The Choral club met Tuesday and listened to a short program under the direction of Miss Leona Smith. The program consisted of a vocal solo, given by Lillian Hollenbacker, a piano solo by Helen Jones, and another vocal solo by Myrtle Waggoner.

Plans were partially completed for a Christmas party to be held by the club. A party committee was appointed, consisting of Helen Jones, chairman, with Mary Niles and Mae Chambers as assistants.

Because so few pupils were able to be in the school orchestra, when it was held Monday morning, Principal C. K. Graham and Prof. Mark Evans, decided to set the practice for Thursday after school. Studies kept many of the pupils from attending the orchestra when it was held Monday morning, as only three pupils of the advanced orchestra could attend at that time.

More than ten pupils have promised to come to practice Thursday evening, and still more are expected to enter the orchestra. Because of other engagements, Professor Evans will not be able to hold the first practice until Thursday, Dec. 4.

The second number of South's Lecture course was held Thursday evening at the Central auditorium. Jesse Pugh, "Humorist Extraordinary" provided the evening of entertainment. Pugh kept the audience in a continual uproar with his humor. He gave his masterspiece, a comedy sketch called 'The Snuff-Stricken Reader." He also gave some serious selections which were very pleasing to the audience.

A large audience filled the auditorium. The next number on the course will be Dec. 9 when Sidney Landon the character artist will give character studies of great men.

WOMEN MAY HATE SNAKES, BUT STILL THEY WILL WEAR THEM

NEW YORK — Women may never get over an instinctive hatred of snakes, but they appear to have conquered all feeling against wearing snakeskin.

Snakeskin hats and shoes were introduced as a novelty last season, and this season they are becoming popular. Beside the snake's contribution to this bookmaker, the leopard, zebra and lion, ostrich, alligator and lizard are doing their bit and delivering their hides.

To photographs show the skin of a king python, a boa-constrictor, a leopard, a zebra and a lion before and after they pass thru the shoe maker's hands.

It is interesting to note that the skin of the jungle animal seems to be much more valuable than that of the homegrown calf or pig. And if economy is a virtue forced upon you, you had better pass up these particular models for they run into money.

LAND TANGLES

Real Estate Survey Proposed for Holy Land

JERUSALEM—(By Associated Press)—A complete real estate survey is the latest reform to be introduced in the Holy Land by the British administration, which announces the engagement of an expert who was lately advisor to the Egyptian ministry of finance and previously inspector of the survey department of that country. This expert will advise the government on the completion of the land survey of Palestine, and on the best method of undertaking a land settlement.

The agricultural progress of Palestine is greatly hampered by the existence of many disputed land titles and undetermined boundaries, as well as by other defects in the land system inherited from the Turkish regime. Because of disputed titles Zionist institutions and individual Jewish colonists are still experiencing difficulties n purchasing land. Even after the completion of a transaction, the right of the owner to sell is frequently questioned by squatters who claim ownership of the land they cultivate, with resulting delay in 'throwing open large areas for intensive cultivation.

Russell Winslow, of Carthage, Ind., professo at the University of Porto Rico, died last night, a few hours after having been attacked, while sea bathing, by a fish which bit off one of his arms. These Girls too Ill to Attend School

DAUGHTER OF MRS. VLIEGHER
NORTH BALTIMORE, OHIO

AT no age does a young girl need greater care than from the time she reaches the age of twelve years until womanhood is established. Many a woman has suffered years of misery because as a girl she has been allowed to sit around with wet feet, lift heavy articles, overwork and overstudy. In all such cases Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be given as it is especially adapted for such conditions. It is a root and herb medicine, contains nothing harmful and may be taken in perfect safety by any school girl.

This Mother's Letter and Daughter's Photograph of Interest to Every American Mother

NORTH BALTIMORE, OHIO.—"My fourteen-year-old daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every month for six months. One of her classmates in school who had the same trouble told her about it. She said: 'My mother makes me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.' So that day she came home and told me and we got some the next day. She took three bottles of it and never has to stay home from school now from sickness. She is strong and well. I am sure it any mother writes to me I will be glad to answer her letter."—Mrs. VLIEGHER, Box 61, North Baltimore, Ohio.

Another Mother Tells What it Did for Her Daughter

—DANDRIDGE, TENN.—"My daughter was just able to go to school for almost a year because of pains in her side and [illegible] girlish ways. I was just studying one day what I could give her that would help her and thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided I would get it for her. Since taking it she has gained to normal weight and goes to school all the time."—Mrs. GEORGE HINCHEY, Dandridge, Tenn.

MAN DESCRIBED AS ROMEO

Romantic Actions Win Divorce for Mrs. Marconnet

SEPARATION DESCRIBED

Lucy Stratton and Jennie Brown Also Successful

Sailors may have sweethearts in every port, but they have nothing on Harry X. Marconnet, Cambridge hotel, B. & O. conductor, according to Mrs. Dorothy Marconnet, 139 S. Pine-st.

In trial of a divorce action Saturday, Mrs. Marconnet, told Judge Becker, her mate boasted of winning village and side track clear to Cincinnati.

She produced two letters written to the defendant by other women, one an old flame and the other a girl who waved at the defendant when he rode by on his train.

She testified that Marconnet boasted of his power over the fair sex and related numerous conquests he had made with girls he met in dance halls and road houses in and around Cincinnati and Dayton.

WELL DRESSED

Marconnet is desribed by his wife as being handsome, dashing, well groomed and possessing a good education. They were married in Dayton in 1909 and have two children, Mathleen, 13 and Harry, 12. Marconnet was away much of the time and frequently stayed a year. He last left the plaintiff in February.

The wife was granted a divorce, with $300 alimony, and an allowance of $10 a week for support of the children. She also won possession of the household goods. Lucy M. Stratton, 123 S. Jackson-st won a decree from Leon Stratton, alias Lynn Stratton, wife deserter now in Ohio state penitentiary. She was given custody of Lola, 5. Stratton never took care of her, she said.

Mrs. Jennie Brown, was divorced from Al Brown, after she had related how he failed to provide for her. The two were married in Sag Harbor, N. Y. He never bought either food or clothing, the wife charged.

Crew Relates Striking Tale Of Highjacking

HALIFAX, N. S. — (By United Press) — Lurid details of "Hijacking" were told by the crew of the steel motor schooner Veronica here Saturday when that vessel was towed into harbor after drifting for weeks at sea.

The officers and men of the Veronica claimed they were boarded by pirates off Montauk Point, N. Y., and for four weeks kept prisoners on their own vessel while the intruders were making away with the schooner's cargo of liquor.

Captain Danielson and two super cargoes were thrown into the Veronica's chain locker and held prisoner there, beaten and forced to work discharging the cargo until they dropped from exhaustion.

Much of the time they were guarded by pirates with drawn revolvers.

After rendering the schooner helpless in the trough of the seas, breaking her auxiliary engine, smashing her chronometers, stealing her compass and all water and provisions, the pirates abandoned the crew to its fate, according to the story.

They claim their cargo was transferred to a large white three masted schooner bearing the name "Elza B. Lunnenberg."

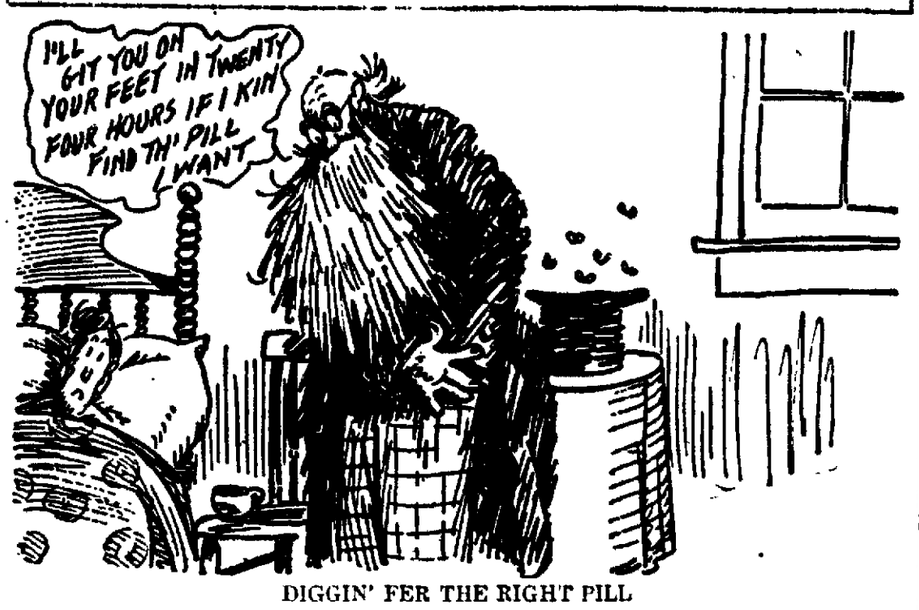

The Veronica was found at sea Thursday by the steamer President Harding flying signals of distress. The President Harding provided the vessel with two days provisions and a compass. The Veronica was then 200 miles west of Halifax. She was later picked up by the Scottish Border and towed into port.

Officers of the Veronica claim 14,000 cases of liquor were taken from the ship.

FIGHT OVER APPLES

Vienna — Two eighty-year old men who were bobbing for apples at a party given for employes of a downtown shop became engaged in a fierce fight over the game. One of the elderly men claimed that his opponent was using his beard to snare the apples in the tub. Police were called to stop the quarrel.

ABE MARTIN — On Ole Time Doctors

DIGGIN' FER THE RIGHT PILL

"I wuz greatly interested in your article last week on ole family doctors, writes a reader from Spring Hills, Ohio, an' then he goes on t' say, "I recall an ole doctor that used t' fiddle with my gran'father's family fer years, or until they all died in the prime o' life.

"His name wuz Dr. Lemuel Putter, an' he rode about in a high wheel sulky or rig, an' I've never seen a yak's tail that had anything on his whiskers. He carried his pills in his pockets.

"I've seen him set down by my gran-maws bed an' listen t' her heart an' nearly put her eyes out with his whiskers, an' he'd shake hay seed all over th' bed.

"'Send fer Dr. Porcupine,' gran'mother used t' say, when any o' th' children fell out of a tree, or had ther feet cut off by a mower.

"'Let me see,' he'd say when he went in a sick room, 't ought t' have a pill that'll pull you through if I kin find it. Then he'd dig in his pockets an' pull out a handful o' pennies an' keys an' jack-knives an' t'backer crumbs an' pills. 'Here we are, he'd say, an' then give th' patient a big dirty pill covered with lint. Maybe th' particular pill he wanted would be in his coat tail pocket or hip pocket.

"When Dr. Futter got up t' go he filled th' room with dust. He dressed like an arctic explorer winter and summer, an' smelled like a combination o' spavin liniment an' livery barn, with a little dash o' harness shop thrown in. When he left th' room it smelled like a justice o' th' peace office durin' county fair week.

"Sometimes Dr. Futter's whiskers would be full o' burrs after a trip t' th' country t' save a cow. If he mixed a flaxseed poultice he mixed his whiskers in it. Sometimes he'd file his saw in th' sick room an' have trouble with his whiskers. If he stood in a grocery they got hacked in th' beef chipper, an' once he bandaged 'em up with my gran'mother's arm.

"Once Dr. Futter stayed at gran'mother's for dinner, an', oh boy! she had cold slaw.

"I've often tried t' imagine Dr. Futter in a golf uniform, or hoppin' about in some great civic undertakin', but it can't be done. He used much th' same system as th' present day tree doctor in sawin' off an' pluggin' up, yet he pilled considerable, too."

The Blue and Gold are banking on their line to keep the Centralites out of South territory while the end running line plunging and aerial work of the backfield is being counted upon to work the ball into Central's territory for scores. South is counting strongly on the line plunging Wren the fleet Throckmorton, the chifty Bowers and the line bucking of Parthold to turn in a score or two and win the game

South's line up to the Cleveland West Commerce and Defiance game was a veritable stone wall. That same line, from end to end likely will start the Central game. Guy, a good defensive and offensive man, will play left end, Workman a man who has played every quarter of the game since the beginning of the 1923 season, will be at left tackle. Either Miner or Rutledge, the latter being also a center will be at left guard. Todt a fine defensive player, will hold down the pivot position and Goebel, big 225 lb guard, may be at right guard. Vastano an aggressive lad, or Vance, a steady and dependable fellow will be at right tackle. Heitzman probably will start at right end

CENTRAL'S LINE

Central's line which would look wonderfully strong and then woefully weak in turns is determined to "stand the gaff" Thursday and will do all in its power to turn back the clever South backfield. Mitchell left tackle and Johns left guard, are said to have developed into two formidable men both fine on the defense. Henderson, left end while weak on the defense is a good offensive man. Yingling, at center is a [illegible] and reliable player while the same may be said also of Captain Stayner at right tackle. In George MacDonald at right end Coach Young indeed has an excellent punter. Weaver right guard is another man who is in every play.

Central's backfield altho thought not to be quite as strong as South's nevertheless will give the Southerners plenty to do to stop them. Means at quarterback finally seems to have gained the experience he lacked at the start of the season and is a good team general. Van Horn, a broken-field runner of the first variety, and Hughes a fast man, will be at the halves. Herb[illegible] the line plunging fo[illegible], will start at fullback, it is thought.

Both teams have a big reserve force. The squads of the two teams number about 40 men each, most of whom will dress for the game. Both have plenty of extra linemen with Central having slightly the advantage there. Both also have a number of good extra backfield men. Central has Stewart Towe B Blattner and [illegible] while South has Bullock, Smith Wright and L Bowers, any one of whom is capable of filling in at a regular berth

Weights of the two teams will differ but slightly and therefore neither will have the advantage in that department. Central's approximate average is 158 pounds while South, thought to have been the heavier team weighs about 155 pounds to the man

It looks like a toss up again, but one never can tell. May the best team win!

Marquardt and Weimer of Dayton have been obtained to officiate at the big game, which will be called promptly at 10 a m Thursday.

HIGH HOPES AND SOLI[illegible] FAITH GUIDE SOUTH

Forty gallant football warriors await the call to the [illegible]nual struggle with their bitterest rival Central High. [illegible]ticipations run high not alone among these boys who ha[illegible] worked so hard who have stood the gruelling tests of th[illegible] mentor, the whips of a cruel antagonist; the pain of bruis[illegible] bodies all for the glory of winning from Central. Not alo[illegible] these husky boys that are picturing in their minds t[illegible] thoughts of victory but fully 1 200 enthusiastic studen[illegible] whose dreams of conquest are just as keen, and whose [illegible] light will know no bounds if the fates decide in favor of their alma mater

And so waiting patiently for Thanksgiving morn to dawn the time for the most important gridiron contest of the whole year to begin the hopes of every single soul from principal to the individual scholars of the seventh grade are wrought to feverish heights expecting Coach Galberach and his team to win for the honor and glory of South

The ramifications of this mighty struggle are not alone confined to teachers and scholars but also to parents and the thousands who lean toward the blue and gold

Since the incipiency of this struggle which began six years ago South has been fortunate in winning three times to Central's twice. Galberach has been indeed fortunate in getting together so excellent a team and he has been drilling these boys with a master hand. They have won a majority of the games they have played so far this season. They have confidence borne of victory with the consequence that they will go in with that quality which goes to win battles whe[illegible]er with cold steel or with a sph[illegible]oid of pig skin. And all the t[illegible]cal scenes of a football field [illegible] be in evidence. CLEVELAND — The thirty third and perhaps the last clash between Case and Reserve football teams here Saturday ended in a scoreless tie. Each team had several golden opportunities to cross the other's goal. Case['s] weakness [illegible] ping pass thru the Red and White [illegible] for long gains that put the ball in position for a touchdown but on each occasion missed its chance. How evenly matched the game was is told by the figures. Case gained 161 yards and Reserve 152. Case had the edge on forward passes, connecting nine for large gains but Reserve evened this up by its superiority on plunging and running the ends

KENYON WON

GAMBIER, O — Peters 35 yard drop kick featured Kenyon's 29 to 0 gridiron victory over Baldwin Wallace here Saturday. Peters also made two other field goals and forward passed sensationally to Rybak, who played a great all around game at end. Kenyon's passing and running attack upset conference dope. Baldwin Wallace was figured to hold Kenyon after defeating Case last week.

The game's only score came early in the final period when Starn booted the ball over the cross bar from Denison's 15 yard line. Four times during the game Wooster was within Denison's 15 yard line only to be held

Central Wins Close Game 7-6

Some may have thought that because the gridders of South and Central came together in their annual clash next Thursday that there was no football game Saturday, but such was not the case. Football fans were remembered and the heavy gridders avoided all risk of injury by having the Junior Highs of the two rival schools play. The Juniors showed good form in a hard battle and little stars were seen in their line ups. The game was close and the regular fight that is shown in the Thanksgiving battles was evident.

The game was played in the Central stadium, and was hard fought thruout, all the scoring being done in the first half. The Central Junior proteges coming out victorious. The final score was 7 to 6.

The youngsters from South kicked off and Central was held for three downs. They punted on the fourth down and the yellow and blue Junior boys obtained the ball in midfield. The Southsiders showed good football strategy and took the ball right down the field scoring the first touchdown of the game. McKinley's place kick was blocked and the score was 6 to 0 for South

South Juniors kicked off again but the first quarter ended without any more scoring

The Central youngsters recovered the ball on a punt in the first part of the second quarter about midfield. The small boys from Central carried the ball right down the line and put it across. Varner kicked for the extra point and the ball hit the goal post and caromed inside, making the score 7 to 6 for Central at the end of the first half. No more scoring was done for the rest of the game but the playing was interesting and showed the boys had true football ability.

In the third quarter Central took the ball to the three yard line and lost it. The Junior Higers showed their true strength at this stage of the game and held the Centralites for downs. The southern proteges immediately punted out of danger.

During the fourth quarter Central lost the ball to South and the blue and gold fought their way up the field. South had the ball on the fifteen yard line when the game ended. Score, Central 7, South 6

The game is protested by Roberson of South who claims Speer Central tackle has been in Junior high over four years

FIGHTING ILLINI WINS AS GRANGE LOOKS ON

CHAMPAIGN, Ills. — (By Associated Press) — With the famed "Red" Grange sitting on the side lines, nursing his damaged shoulder, Illinois convinced its admirers that it was not entirely a one-man team today by vanquishing Ohio State, 7 to 0, in the final game of the Western Conference championship season.

The game, lacking the dash and fire of Illinois' early season triumphs when Grange sprinted up and down the lines for sensational runs, was played in the Illinois Memorial Stadium before about 30,000 spectators. The weather was cloudy and raw and at times there was a light spitting of rain.

The "Fighting Illini," shaking off the despondency resulting from the Minnesota upset a week ago, crashed over with a touchdown in the first period, with Ray Gallivan, a sophomore quarterback, carrying the ball. He played a stellar game sharing honors with Mellwain. Green trying his best to fill the gap caused by Grange's injuries, was no Grange, but was ably assisted in carrying the Illinois attack along with Gallivan and Britton.

The Illinois line weakened at Minnesota, braced and forced the Buckeyes to resort to passes frequently. Illinois was not seriously threatened at any time while the Ohioans were battling courageously in their own territory most of the game. Ohio's big chance to score came on the kickoff when Britton fumbled and Dreyer of Ohio recovered on the Illinois' 27 yard line. Three plays at the line failed and Hunt's place kick from the 37-yard line was short by five yards.

McILWAIN'S LAST GAME

On ten drives at the line and off tackle Illinois took the ball to Ohio's 14 yard line where the Buckeyes held and Britton missed a place kick. Illinois took Hunt's punt on their own 40-yard line and Wally McIlwain, playing his last game at half for Illinois, started the march for touchdown with a 16-yard thrust at tackle. A 25 yard pass, Gallivan to Britton, and plunges by Green and McIlwain put the ball on Ohio's one yard line and Gavlivan crowded it thru center for a touchdown, Britton kicking goal.

Illinois threatened several times during the remainder of the game but was unable to score. Britton attempted a 51-yard place kick on one occasion, missed the shot by inches.

CLOSING MINUTES

In the closing minutes of the game, Illinois took the ball on downs on Ohio's 30-yard line and smashed and passed its way to Ohio's one-yard line. Green, on fourth down, smashed across and the spectators cut loose with a tremendous cheer, thinking he had scored. An instant later, they were dumbfounded when the ball was brought back and Illinois penalized five yards for offside.

Illinois was superior in almost every department of the game, gaining 281 yards in 65 plays and completing three of six passes for a total of 52 yards.

Ohio aatempted 12 passes, completing three for 39 yards.

OBERLIN RESTS AT TOP OF CONFERENCE RACE

(By The Associated Press)

Her record unmarred in Buckeye Conference circles, Oberlin tonight rests at the top of the heap, the undisputed champion of the 1924 Ohio conference football season.

It remained however until this afternoon before Oberlin could lay clear claim to her title which came when Ohio University swept Ohio Wesleyan before her in a bitter defeat for the Delaware team, the first conference whipping Coach Gauthier's men had taken in nearly three years.

Three conference games remain to be played Thanksgiving Day but they will have no bearing on determining this season's champions, altho they will settle the fight for the runnerup position.

Oberlin's victory this year was well won. A disappointment to her followers last season, her outlook for a bright 1924 season was doubtful for she lost some star players thru graduation and changed coaches. Starting the season off with a victory, Oberlin had to race madly to keep to the top of the heap. She was nearly caught by Case a couple of weeks ago and emerged from this game by the smallest score of the season 2 to 0.

GLOOM REIGNS IN DELAWARE

Gloom and sorrow reigns in Delaware tonight where the supporters of Ohio Wesleyan had visions of claiming a joint championship for the third consecutive year. But it was not to be. All week the Red and Black coaches had warned their men against overconfidence and altho the team fought valiantly, Ohio University could not be denied the honor of breaking Ohio Wesleyan's long conference winning streak.

On offense Oberlin was the sterling scoring machine of the conference, piling up 151 points nearly fifty more than her closest opponent. Wooster who has scored 106. On defense, Oberlin also proved she was the best machine in the conference, granting her foes but 16 points.

Wittenberg today is in second place but must dispose of Ohio Northern before she can claim the runnerup position. Ohio Wesleyan with her 1,000 percentage broken for the first time in three seasons, finds herself in third place.

CASE WONDER TEAM

Case, the conference's wonder team this year, ranks next and ties with Wooster with six victories and two defeats.

A feature of today's games was St. Xavier's victory over Otterbein, the first conference victory for either of Cincinnati's conference representatives.

Hiram wound up her season going down in a seventh consecutive defeat. She had the poorest offensive and defensive record of any eleven in the circuit scoring only six points while 220 were marked up against her.

The conference standing:

Team	W.	L.	T'd

DAZZY VANCE LIKES GOLF

DAZZY VANCE

Dazzy Vance, the pitching sensation of the National league, is also a crack golfer.

Vance spends his winters in Florida and plays from 18 to 36 holes every day during the off season.

He is strong for the game not only as a conditioner but also because he believes it makes for accuracy. The habit of concentrating, so essential in golf, has helped him to better his control in baseball.

Experts say that if Vance continues to improve as he has during the past two years, he will soon be ready for tournament play if he aspires to golfing honors.

CHOATE WINS

WALLINGFORD, Conn. — (Special)—Choate football team defeated Taft school here Saturday by a 10-0 score in one of the hardest fought games ever witnessed on the school gridiron. Choate scored in the first quarter on a 30-yard drop kick by Tracy and again in the third quarter when Heisey carried the ball over from the five yard line. Durrell McLaughlin, Lima athlete playing quarterback for Choate, thrilled the crowd with his open field running. His forward passes paved the way for Choate's touchdown.

BLUE'S INJURY COSTLY

Detroit players are of the opinion they would have won the American League pennant had it not been for the loss of First Baseman Lu Blue. Perhaps.

BRITTON ALWAYS "IN"

Fullback Britton of Illinois is seldom removed from a game by Coach Zuppke. Britton is inclined to take on weight and Zuppke keeps him in the lineup for conditioning purposes.

OLD PLAYERS BELIEVE IN REDUCING NUMBER

BY GEORGE CHADWICK

NEW YORK — Bitter opposition has developed among ball players to the proposal put forward by the New York Americans for consideration at the major league meetings in December that the player limit be extended to 50 players, instead of 40, in the spring season and also in the fall season.

The ball players contend that with such a surplus of players a youngster taken in by a major league club can be used in two successive years to pay up baseball debts. He may be good for something but he may not get a chance to show what he can do. The same thing can happen now with the player limit at 40 but if the limit goes up to fifty, the players say 25 players will be at the mercy of every major league club, to be sent here and there and never to have any settled baseball future until they have been at least two years at the disposal of a major league club.

The player limit has been a matter of controversy for some time. There are some who think that the greater the number of players under control of the major clubs the less chance that the majors have of failing for lack of reserve strength.

Others hold exactly the contrary. They argue that the adding of players to those already under the jurisdiction of the major league clubs simply adds to the looseness of management and the growing disposition to guess upon the constant placing of players on the field, rather than to develop them and increase their efficiency so they may be relied upon.

35 PLAYERS ENOUGH

The old guard of baseball almost without exception declares that the game would be better played and more acceptable to the spectators if the player limit was not to exceed 35 the year round.

The newer element in baseball and that element which is both old and new, and which holds to the theory that the game has become a show business, is for the control of all the players possible, in order that the younger men may be used for trading purposes or be developed into regulars as the manager sees fit. It is evident that only a part of a squad of forty or fifty men can be used in a championship race, if a manager wishes to be successful, so there must be a certain proportion that never will get much benefit because they happen to be connected for the time being with a major league club. Fifty percent, probably will go overboard annually.

John M. Ward, in his day a successful manager, thinks the present day manager has too many players with whom to juggle.

BROUTHERS IS RIGHT

Dan Brouthers, an old ball player and in his time the greatest of batsmen, thinks there are too many players to each team and too little spirit to each player. He cites the success of the Washington club this year as showing what a small squad can do if it has the spirit to do it.

John Morrill, former manager and captain of the old Bostons, in his time one of the best first baseman and also one of the shrewdest of managers, is convinced that baseball suffers from too much substitution, and too little development of the playing strength of the different teams.

Joe Hornung left fielder of the old Boston champions, thinks there are so many players on a club that they get in each others way some of them are to nervous, fearing they will be replaced with others that they never give their best because of mental disquiet.

At least 20 players were cut out in 1924 who were used to pay up baseball debts instead of cash. In some instances old timers are not that late and there are many because some of them insist that if they were free agents they could make much better contracts with the minor league clubs as individuals than they can make when they are sent to minor league clubs presumably on option, but in reality to make good to the minor club for some other player.

Ada Hi Beats Kenton On Grid

KENTON (Special) — Ada high beat Kenton high here Friday afternoon, 26 to 7, when "Red" Brecheisen, star Ada captain and quarterback, ran amuck and scored point after point for the visitors.

Brecheisen was the outstanding star of the game. Besides scoring all of Ada's points, he punted and passed a wet and slippery ball well and returned punts on an average of 25 yards. One of his touchdowns was made on a 60-yard sprint along the sidelines. Dick Allen, Brecheisen's running mate, also played a stellar game.

Brecheisen scored three touchdowns, two perfect field goals and two points after touchdowns. Pugh, Kenton fullback, played best for the losers.

YALE CRASHES THRU TO SPLENDID VICTORY

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — (By Associated Press) — A blue tidal wave, gathering fury as it rolled on, surged thru the Yale bowl this afternoon, submerged the gallant Crimson defenders and swept on to smashing victory.

Out of the morasses of the Eli gridiron, churned into a sea of muck and mire by a torrential downpour thruout the game that beat down upon a vast but bedraggled crowd of 74,000 banked upon the slopes of the bowl, Yale's mighty football machine rose to new heights of glory by conquering Harvard 19 to 6, and capturing the "Big Three" crown for second successive year.

Beaten back, outplayed and held scoreless in the first half of this mud battle, in which Harvard showed surprising strength and scored twice on field goals thru the brilliant kicking of Gehrke, Cleveland halfback, who was the Crimson's outstanding hero, Yale rallied in the second half and half the half smashed its way to triumph in one of the greatest exhibitions of driving power under seemingly insurmountable odds ever witnessed.

Thru the last half, Harvard was helpless, beaten back but fighting stubbornly, while Yale, alert and irresistible, drove on with a relentless series of onslaughts in which "Ducky" Pond, of Torrington, Conn., a hero of Yale's triumph at Cambridge a year ago, and Billy Kline, of Dubois, Pa., his running mate, always were the spearheads.

It was a crushing setback for Harvard, despite her gallant fight, for the Crimson closed one of its most disappointing seasons by losing to both her ancient foes, the Tiger and Bulldog, for the first time in 35 years.

HOLDS CHICAGO TO TIE DESPERATE FIGHTING

CHICAGO — (By Associated Press) — The University of Chicago eleven, by a desperate fight today kept its 1924 record unsullied by defeat, altho held to a scoreless tie by highly keyed up Wisconsin team.

The result gave the Maroons the championship of the Big Ten.

Wisconsin won what its supporters considered a moral victory, stopping the grinding Chicago attack and uncovering an offense that sparkled with fake punts and forward pass formations from which ball was run, thrown or kicked in the air most of the time after that until late in the second quarter.

The Maroons' defense braced mightily when in dire need and then hurried the Wisconsin field goal kickers so that all attempts missed.

Wisconsin made its first threat early in the opening period when they kicked and took the ball to within six yards of Chicago's goal. In this crisis C. Gordon, a substitute Maroon fullback broke thru and dropped a Wisconsin back for a loss. Kernwein punted out of danger and the ball was

Soldier Boys Win From St. Marys

Thru a hard fight Co. F., of Spencerville won over St. Marys Athletes by a score of 26-25.

St. Marys started the game by making two baskets in succession. Then the Company team began to check up on their men, and started to work the ball down the floor for a goal after the first score they had no trouble in finding the basket and at the end of the first half the Co. F lads led by a score of 19-20.

At the beginning of the second half St. Marys started to rally but their attempts were useless as Spencerville had such a lead over them they were unable to catch up.

Busy Season Looms For Cagers

Lima News basketeers are busy as Baxter-st merchants getting into shape. August Falk, manager and captain is more than pleased with the outlook, avowing that several of the players, who previously made history on local basketball floors are working with all their old time skill, and the new members are showing up well. Miller is going to be a tower of strength at the left guard position, while Howell is going to be one of the most valued players on the team; Agee, the Toledo tornado will be found one of the fastest players at center there is in Lima.

The fact that this team is looked upon as exceptionally strong is proven thru a local paper soliciting all the best players of the city. Players from Central Hi, St Johns, South Hi, St. Rose and calling itself a newspaper team. It is suggested that they call on reserved forces of the Cincinnati Tigers or some of the best teams of the east to gain the strength needed to cope with the Lima News cagers. Manager Falk has their challenge under consideration. It is not definitely known whether the schedule will admit of a game with this alleged newspaper team. The outcome of his decision will rest until games against neighboring teams have been given first consideration.

National League players insist Virgil Barnes, Giants' star right hander, will be the big noise of 1925.

GARVEY, GRID STAR, TRIES BOXING GAME

BY SPARROW McGANN

NEW YORK — (Special) — Ed Garvey, the former Notre Dame football star who gave up an established law practice to try his hand at the boxing game, got away to a poor start in his initial attempt to reach the goal that means millions to a pugilist—the world's heavyweight crown.

The fact is that Garvey's football reputation has done him a great deal of harm. His type is a rarity in the boxing game and he was, as a consequence, heralded altogether too deliriously for his own good. Far better for him had he come out of the wilds an unknown; for then, with little expected of him, his natural ability would have been credited for what it was worth and more time given him for development.

As it was, Garvey went into action knowing he was expected to produce like a champion and in trying to live up to the nice things predicted about him he did not show as well as he otherwise might have done.

Garvey should keep firmly in mind that in the ring game he stands in about the same position as a high school player shoved into a varsity lineup and asked to cope with seasoned players. In other words he has got to take his time and proceed carefully.

HAS CRUDE OPPONENT

As it happened, in the heavyweight show at which he appeared in the garden the other night Garvey's opponent was more crude han Garvey was. This was fortunate for the former football star. As it was, in his over-anxiety to show at his best and put over a finishing punch in jig time he detracted from his real ability.

The up and up on Garvey is this: With proper schooling and the edge of newness worn off, he looks like a good prospect. He has a world of speed in his solid under-pinning; he has a first rate idea of value of a left hand jab, and he packs a punch in his right hand.

When Garvey learns how to walk into his opponent with a proper defense and forgets the fulsom praise written about him he will go far in his chosen profession—unless he gets mixed up with some of the wrong characters in the game and self-respect compels him to give it all up as something he does not care to touch.

JACK MAY GO WEST

It might not be surprising if Jack Dempsey were asked to go out to San Francisco—where he got his start—and inaugurate the new boxing activities in that city. There is talk all over California of Dempsey visiting some particular spot, but if there is any such thing as gratitude in the soul of a boxer Dempsey will yield to the desires of Tommy Simpson, the Oakland promoter, the man who gave the champion his first chance. Dempsey would have to come at a reasonable price, but with an opponent promising no great difficulty for him, friends of Simpson feel he could inguce the titleholder to show in the city across the bay.

As things stand at present the nearest approach to a Christmas holoday match is announced by Simpson, who is angling for a ten-round bout between Jimmy Duffy (Hyman Cold of Oakland) and Lew Tendler. Tendler and others have always claimed that Gold quit on a foul when the two met in New York. But the Californian denies that and wants a chance to show that Tendler is the last fighter who can make him quit.

Local train travel in some [illegible] has dropped as much as 55 per cent since 1916, while motor touring over long distances has cut almost as deeply into the profits of the steam roads.

In a check up of tourist travel by auto and railroad among hotels of famous resorts it was [illegible] that [illegible] of the tourists got to the place by auto. One at Poland Spring, Me., reported [illegible] to arrived by auto while [illegible] came by rail. Another hotel checked up [illegible] guests coming by auto and [illegible] by rail.

"Practically all of this resort traffic if moved by train would naturally have patronized Pullman service on account of the travel distance and character of the traffic involved," adds Burt.

Checks of passenger auto traffic into important centers also pointed to the immense business taken from the railroads by the automobile. One of these checks on the National Highway at Cumberland, Md., showed 2359 cars passing a given point in one day, about half of them having Maryland licenses.

It showed more than 1150 cars passing this point, all from foreign states, of which 32 were recorded during the day.

"There is no assurance the occupants of these cars would have availed of train service in the absence of automobile accommodations," Burt comments. "But it is reasonable to assume that a large proportion of this travel would have moved by train service, either availing of coach or Pullman car accomodations."

Lima Company Takes Agency For Moon Car

The [illegible] Auto Sales Co., [illegible] W. High st., the new Moon motor car distributor for [illegible] and surrounding territory, which includes six counties, it was announced Saturday.

Moon is one of the motor cars that stands four square on the balloon tire issue, according to George H. Kublin, Moon chief engineer, and altho some automobile manufacturers are equipping their 1925 models with a semi balloon tire and the regular large size wheels, Kublin considers such equipment a compromise and a make shift which sacrifices both the riding qualities and performance of cars so equipped.

Before adoption full size balloon tires, the Moon engineering department thoroly tested out both the genuine balloon tire and the semi balloon tire equipment, subjecting them to hundreds of miles of road service. Effect of both types of low pressure tires on the riding qualities, performance and wear on the car itself also were carefully studied. By actual tests it was revealed that the semi balloon tire made riding just a little easier than the old style pressure tire, and that cars equipped with semi balloon tires did not perform nearly as well, especially on hills, as those equipped with balloon tires.

Now comes the annual warnings against carbon monoxide poisoning from fuel fumes. These come [illegible] from running the auto engine within a closed garage.

Maxwell Motor Announces New Model For 1925

A new Maxwell, of greater power and power pliability, higher speed, more flexibility and even greater operating economy, is announced from Detroit by the Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation.

Experiments and tests reveal that outstanding features of the new model will be a [illegible] average of 25 miles to the gallon, speed of 58 miles an hour and acceleration from 5 to 25 miles in eight seconds, according to reports from the factory.

"With a full [illegible] of the [illegible] of the statement [illegible] fully weighing the meaning of every word Maxwell [illegible] engineers without reservation thoroly believe that they can produce in the new Maxwell performance surpassing in every essential any other four cylinder car in the world," says J. E. Fields, vice president of the Maxwell organization.

Coupled with the announcement comes the information that prices remain the same as before, with one exception despite the noticeable appearance, [illegible] and economy improvements. Only the sedan price is changed, there being a slight increase in view of new body and [illegible] and tire equipment.

Sealed! to protect Buick performance

1. FAN HUB—Fan bearing totally enclosed—lubricated by its own gear pump.
2. MOTOR—Steel cover keeps water from entering spark plugs. Steel cover over valve-in-head mechanism keeps dust out, also.
3. STARTER-GENERATOR—Delco single unit starter-generator completely housed in single housing. Starting gears housed with flywheel.
4. FLYWHEEL—Completely housed. Starting teeth protected from road damage and accumulation of mud and dirt.
5. [illegible]—Multiple disc completely housed.
6. TRANSMISSION—Completely protected. Sliding mechanism fully sealed.
7. UNIVERSAL JOINT—Completely enclosed in ball joint. It attends torque tube—lubricated automatically from transmission.
8. PROPELLER SHAFT—Buick's third member drive, which has a torque tube, completely encloses the propeller shaft. It is impossible for road dirt to work into the shaft into the universal joint or rear axle.
9. REAR AXLE—Floating type, totally enclosed in rear axle housing.

Lima Oakland Agency Hires Sales Manager

C. W. Matheson, vice-president and director of sales of the Oakland Motor Car Co., announces that William M. Chamberlain has joined the Oakland sales organization to take charge of sales development work, which will feature cooperation with the dealer organization in respect to merchandising problems.

Chamberlain has had extensive experience in this field, having been engaged in advertising and sales development work for practically his entire business career. In 1907 he organized the Chamberlain company, one of the earliest advertising agencies in Detroit, which business he later sold. During the late war he served as a major on general staff duty with the United States army in France. For two years immediately following the war he was manager of the Chicago branch of the Irving Bank and Columbia Trust Co.

In 1921 Chamberlain was associated with President W. R. Wilson in the reorganization of the Maxwell Motor Co. serving as assistant to A. P. Barker, who was in charge of sales. Later on he became director of districts and education for this company.

More recently he has acted as sales manager for the Haynes Automobile Co., which position he resigned to take up his present duties.

Chevrolet Aids Dealers Giving Better Service

One of the most noticable tendencies during the last year and a half in the automotive industry has been the stress placed by all motor car companies on "dealers' service" and the efforts many of the companies are making to help their dealers in their service work in every possible way.

Flat rate prices, uniform, modern tool and general equipment, constitute some of the big movements that have been emphasized lately to make service more efficient and reliable for the general public.

Along the lines of service education, the Chevrolet Motor Co. has a system of service schools where the proper use of tools and equipment is taught in addition to general shop management, shop operation and flat rate service. Seven schools are established, one in each of the seven manufacturing zones. The schools are established in Flint, Mich.; Janesville, Wis.; St. Louis, Mo.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Buffalo, New York; Tarrytown, New York and Oakland, Calif.

Each school period lasts for five days. Each school has two instructors. Each member in the school is given special and general class instruction in every phase of repair, which includes the complete building of a motor, testing it and tearing it down. Examinations are given both when members enter and leave the school.

There is just one Lost Creek Addition. Nothing else so nice. Dailey & Dorsey, Main 1786.

Buick Displays Effect Of Dirt On Automobiles

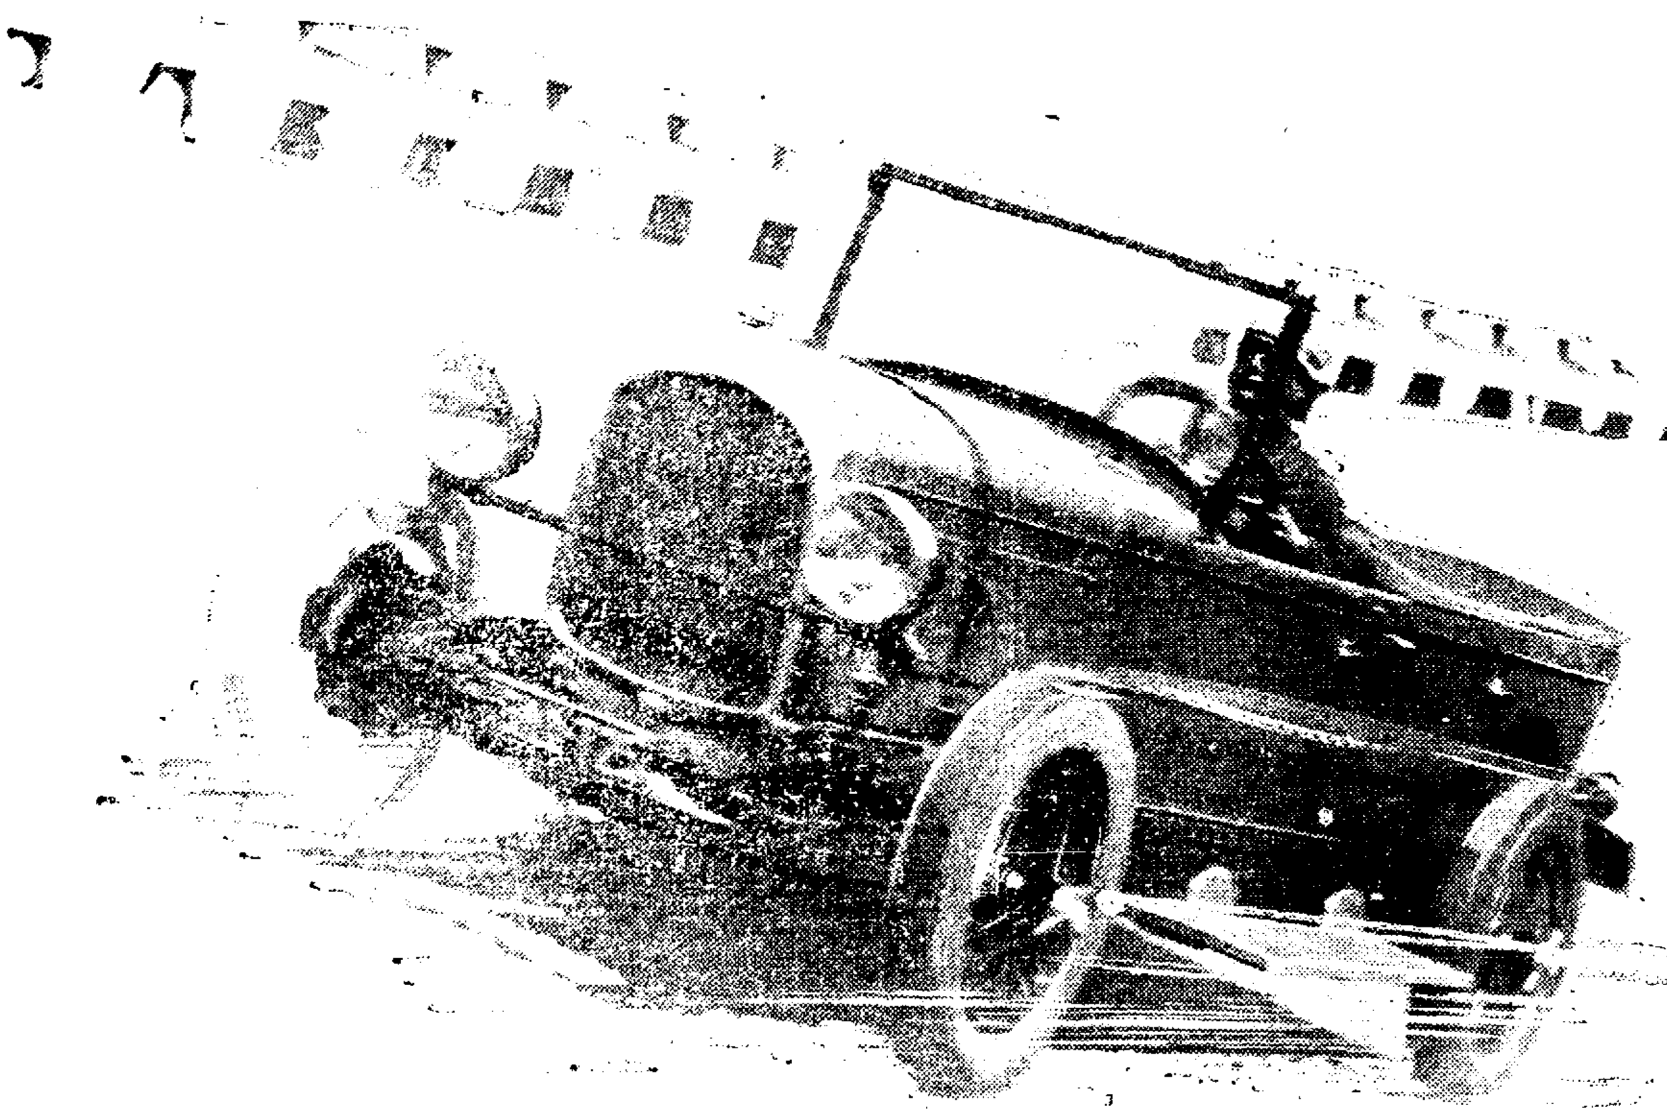

Dirt and water have the same ravaging effect on an automobile that tuberculosis has on a human being, sapping the strength and shortening the life of the vital parts of an automobile's motive plant. That it is possible to thwart these destructive elements by locking them out of every vital part is being demonstrated this week in the new salesroom of the Lima Buick Co., 512 W. Market-st.

The exhibit consists of a stripped chassis with ribbons and seals pointing out the nine vital points where dirt and water are kept out and lubricant is kept in by the special Buick construction. Faster Than The "Century"

Observe the map showing the run of the Twentieth Century Limited from New York to Chicago, via Albany, Buffalo and Cleveland.

Compare the performance of the Chrysler Six with that of the New York Central's crack train which has the advantage of tracks and road-bed always in first class condition and carefully guarded.

The Twentieth Century Limited covers the 978 miles between New York and Chicago in 20 hours. Allowing for stops, the average speed is between 50 and 55 miles per hour.

There are several changes of engine and engine crews during the run.

The Chrysler Six covered its 1,000 miles in 14 hours, 38 minutes and 10 8-10 seconds with the same man driving the same car continuously.

The 1,000 miles would take it from New York to Chicago over the Twentieth Century's route and 22 miles beyond, or within 15 miles of Joliet, Ill.

Here is a record-breaking demonstration of stamina and dogged endurance—A demonstration the like of which the automotive industry, with all its heroic achievements on road and track, has never witnessed before—A demonstration of something far greater than breathless speed—A demonstration that, most of all, proves superb engineering and materials and workmanship of the highest order, equal to heartbreaking demands to which no car is ever submitted by its owner.

A Chrysler Six stock car, driven by Ralph de Palma, won the Los Angeles Times Trophy Cup on the Fresno, Calif., track, Sept. 17th, by covering 1,000 miles in 1,007 minutes, 54 seconds, of elapsed time.

Deducting the time consumed by necessary stops such as for gas, oil, tires etc., the actual net running time was 878 minutes, 10 8-10 seconds.

The Chrysler Six used for this amazing demonstration was strictly a stock car—exactly the same in every particular as the car you buy from the salesroom floor—no change in gear ratio and absolutely stock to the last bolt and nut.

It was certified as a stock car by the committee under the rules of the contest.

Its time was clocked and certified by three associated members of the A. A. A.

Speed was not the prime purpose of this demonstration. The Chrysler Six was already known far and wide as a car that will deliver better than 70 miles an hour if anyone cares to go that fast.

But driving 1,000 miles in 878 minutes is something far more than an exhibition of speed.

Such an experience would rack to pieces the car of ordinary construction and materials long before the 1,000 miles were rolled off.

To accomplish that feat requires hitherto unrealized stamina and endurance, engineering of unquestioned soundness and superiority, materials and workmanship of the highest order.

No owner cares to drive 1,000 miles in 878 minutes.

But if he has a car that can make such a record he knows that he has one that will do more than he will ever ask of it, that it will have long life and cost amazingly little to maintain.

And the Chrysler Six you select from the salesroom floor is exactly the same as the Chrysler Six with which Ralph de Palma made his record.

BAND GIVES CONCERT

Commercial Club Reorganizes and Elect Officers

At the weekly mass meeting Friday, the Central High band gave a very well prepared concert. The numbers were well accepted by the students and all seemed to enjoy the music. Another feature of the program was a solo by the famous cornetist, Robert E. Bruce. Harry Kleinberger, an alumnus of Central, played his accompaniment.

The tickets for the South-Central football game are going rapidly, according to E. A. Haunstein. Sections E and F in the center of the north side, are reserved for Central students as a rooting section and the three sections on each side of these are reserved seats. All tickets for seats on the north side of the field, Central's side, can be obtained from Haunstein at Room 117, Central High school building. Sections O and P in the center of the south side of the field are being reserved for South students and the tickets for that side of the field may be obtained at South High school.

Central's gym is being entirely revamped and will be ready for the first game. The floors are being sanded, refinished and remarked for both boys' and girls' basketball, indoor baseball, and volley ball. The big change will be a new entrance for spectators. The entrance will be on the west side, ticket booths and concession stand will be put in also. Due to the fact that basketball is gaining such great favor lately, new and permanent bleachers are being put in all around the track.

Height and Velocity of Waves Under Observation

WASHINGTON — (By Associated Press) —Jules Verne's exploration of the sea bottom by the mythical Captain Nemo is to have its counterpart in reality, if recommendations embodied in the final report of the conference on oceanography to the secretary of the navy, made public today, are put into practice.

The U. S. S. Rainbow, which has recently been on ... in the Orient, would be fitted out for oceanographic research under the plan as outlined by the committee, George ... secretary ... of the conference. The region of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea, including bordering parts of the North Atlantic extending thru the Panama canal into the Pacific, has been selected as the starting point of the expedition. An estimated expenditure of $7,000 would be required at first.

PART OF ACTIVITIES

With Captain ... U. S. N., hydrographer of the navy as its president, the conference recommended that research work in oceanography form a permanent part of naval activities. Those who took part in the conference included representatives of the State, Treasury, War, Navy, Interior, Agriculture and Commerce departments, the Smithsonian Institution, the National Academy of Sciences and National Research Council, the Library of Congress, the Carnegie Institution and Shipping Board, as well as Secretary Wilbur, Captain F. W. Wallace, editor of Fishing Gazette and Herbert J. Browne, long range weather forecaster.

A national cooperative program of research in oceanography is the goal seen by the conference. To explore some of the ocean waters that cover five sevenths of the earth's surface and exploit food, plant and animal resources in them, and gain scientific, geographic, economic and climatic information, is the motive that prompts it.

The definite objects which the conference had in mind are: Discovering, developing and utilizing the resources of the sea, facilitating navigation of the sea and air, improving communication by radio and submarine cable, promoting human welfare thru scientific discovery and the progress of knowledge and safe guarding human life. Work in the North Pacific and North Atlantic oceans would be undertaken at a later time.

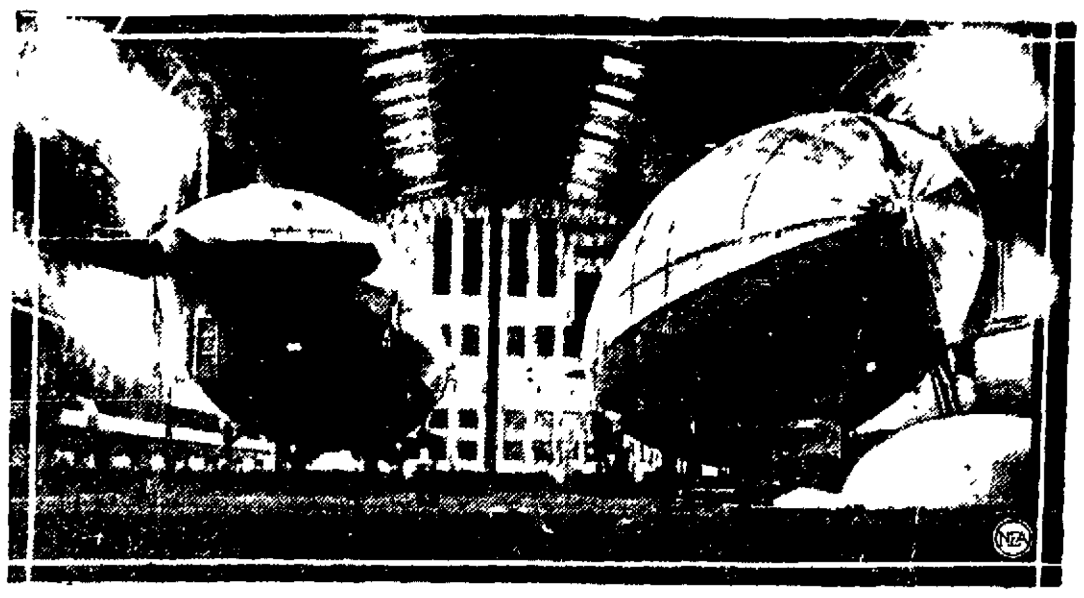

OCEAN DEPTHS

Among the scientific problems to be taken up are: Shapes, contours and depths of ocean basins; evaporation and rain, fog and snow over sea and land areas, distribution and periodic changes in atmospheric pressures and winds; ocean currents and vertical circulation of ocean waters, sea water chemistry; shifting of shore lines, warping of margins of continents and submarine upheavals and dislocations, nature and composition of sea bottom ... land connection ... existing connections ... continents ... and ... of submarine ... quake ... light ... and its ... animal life, distribution ... relative abundance ... interrelations of various forms of plant and animal life ... different atmospheric conditions, height, length and velocity of ocean waves, and the location and extent of fields ... static and electro-static disturbances and investigations of other forms of atmospheric electricity.

NEW FISHING BANKS

Included in the ... results which the conference expects are: Discovery of new fishing banks as aid to food supply, full understanding of climate and developing of better means of predicting weather conditions, solution of weather problems affecting sea and air navigation, knowledge of iceberg drifts, location of deposits of oil, ores and other economically important resources and improvement of radio communication and reduction of operating cost of radio stations. Specimens of scientific importance would be transferred to the National Museum for study, exchange or other disposition agreed on with the navy.

SALMON GATHER

Fish From Seaboards Flourish in Lake Ontario

OTTAWA — (By Associated Press)—Salmon from the seaboards of America live and grow fat in the waters of Lake Ontario and the streams of British Columbia, according to a bulletin issued by the Canadian Department of Marine and Fisheries announcing success of a six-year experiment. Fully matured sockeyes, native to the Pacific coast, have been taken from Lake Ontario this year and two-year-old Atlantic salmon have been caught in the Pacific coming down the Cawichan river of Vancouver Island.

An average of 200,000 young sockeye have been released in Lake Ontario each year since 1918, and 500,000 Atlantic salmon have been planted in the rivers of British Columbia in the same period.

Last year a Canadian fisheries production was estimated at $42,565,545, with British Columbia, having the most extensive salmon resources on the continent, accounting for 50 per cent of the business. Salmon, halibut, lobster and codfish constitute 69 per cent of the Dominion production.

Know what's underneath the paint before you buy

YOU wouldn't think of buying a house without first knowing how it is built and the quality of materials used. In selecting a piece of furniture you are sure to find out whether it is solid wood or veneer.

Yet many people who exercise care in most purchases buy automobiles without even lifting the hood or knowing about the hidden qualities of body and chassis construction that really determine one's satisfaction with a closed car.

* * *

We want you to know about the unseen qualities of the new Studebaker Standard Six Sedan.

Down underneath its superb body finish is a sturdy framework of carefully selected ash, glued together and fastened in place by screws—not nailed. Ash is scarce and expensive, but Studebaker uses it because it best combines proper weight and strength.

Upholstery is genuine mohair of high quality. Various grades of mohair look much alike—the big difference is in the quality.

Beneath this mohair covering are many nests of cushion springs, padded with heavy burlap, upholstery cotton and curled hair. Almost any car seems comfortable on the showroom floor, but it's quality such as this that makes the Studebaker Standard Six remain comfortable after years of service.

The same standards of excellence are maintained throughout the body and chassis. In the engine, for example, the crankshaft is completely machined on all surfaces, a practice that results in the smooth, quiet, vibrationless performance that characterizes all Studebaker cars.

* * *

Judged solely on what your eye can see—in beauty of line and finish and exterior refinements—the Studebaker Standard Six Sedan will command your instant approval.

But go deeper than that. Compare its hidden, vital qualities—its design, materials and workmanship—with cars selling for hundreds of dollars more.

Studebaker never compromises—never uses a substitute for genuine quality. Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for 72 years.

Come in and let us tell you the "inside story" of the Studebaker Standard Six Sedan.

WOMEN STUDY CIVIC NEEDS AT LUNCHEON

City Manager C. A. Bingham Supported In Enactment of New Zoning Code—Women Sponsor Legion Movement For New Government Hospitals

Need of Additional Parks and Playgrounds Stressed by F. E. Harman—Clubs In Hearty Endorsement of Plans for Better City—Dr. Basinger Speaks

BY MARGARET SIMPSON

The club women attending the open meeting and luncheon of the Federation of Women's clubs held Saturday noon at Barr Hotel pledged their cooperation in all civic improvement movements and promised to support the city officials in any successful culminations of plans under consideration and any further steps to be taken by the city for municipal betterment.

Aid of the Federation was also made to the American Legion in its hospitalization work, for the care of disabled veterans of the world war and of the war widows and support of the movement for the erection of more hospitals and schools to provide for additional vocational education for these men.

In connection with the study of the municipal affairs City Manager C. A. Bingham gave an enlightening talk on the operation of the new zoning ordinance, telling how it tends to provide for a more beautiful city and protection of property values by restriction of locations of various buildings. He also urged the necessity of a building code to function in connection with the zoning ordinance

F E Harman, president of the Park Board, advocated parks to serve for recreation centers for the always increasing population and urged the purchase of several available locations, which are suitable for such purposes, realizing the asset that a park brings to the city in general beautification, in addition to providing supervised play for children, with the resultant establishment of better safety by eliminating street accidents.

Dr Harvey L. Basinger told of the work being done in the American Legion and its Auxiliaries and explained that the Ohio Physical Education bill was purely a product of the effort of the Legion. He told of hospitalization and compensation movements to which the women pledged their support.

Mrs. Sherman S. Lawson, chairman of the Community Service committee in charge of Saturday's meeting opened the program by explaining the work being done by the committee and asked the support of all the club women in cooperating with the newspapers in making a cleaner press, by arousing public opinion against the sensational material used.

Mrs Nancy Schoonmacher, New York and Mrs. J. Annett, Sidney were guests at the meeting as well as C. A. Bingham, Harold Cunningham, Earl Rohn, Ellis Jones, all city officials, Frank E. Harman and Dr Harvey Basinger.

Other members of the committee assisting Mrs. Lawson were: Mrs C S. Lathrop, Mrs. Fred Ash, Mrs L. H Rogers, Miss Violet Bradley and Mrs. T. E. Drake.

BOWS OF DEBUTANTES SET SOCIETY AWHIRL

"Sweet Charity" Is Agreeable Excuse For Pre-Holiday Parties in Capital

BY JEAN JARVIS

WASHINGTON — (Special)— Now that the first debutante has made her bow to set the social season off, this year's girls are busy arranging the gayest sort of parties, with "sweet charity" as a pleasantly agreeable excuse on which to hang some very good pre-holiday times.

The bal de tete" is a case in point. In this instance, the heads of all and sundry are going to be set off with some perfectly wondrous "fixin's." Sartorial history is being ransacked and the result will justify the arduous digging into dusty tomes and the adroit manipulation of fabrics, of jewel-decked silks and velvets and of needles handled by more or less experienced fingers.

To add to the sum-total of the proceeds of the "bal de tete," a group of particularly gifted girls are going to busy themselves making headdresses and disposing of them for a good round price.

The fete at which Violet Spencer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benning Spencer, initiated the social season was a gala one, indeed. All Washington was there, bowing and smiling, a glad omen of the gay time to come.

Miss Spencer was received into Washington society, one of the most charming debutantes for many years, in her Vionnet frock of white georgette, carrying orchids. She had Helen Maryo and Louise Ireland and some other entirely diverting "sister buds" to share the glory with her. Mrs "Joe" Leiter and Mrs. John Wilkins, both about as promising sponsors as any forward-looking debutante could pick out were among these who assisted the very attractive Mrs. Spencer, who was all in silvery grey satin.

Miss Spencer, Louise Ireland Louise Ireland and Helen Maryo (you know she's said to be really engaged to a most engaging young Italian nobleman) have all spent the greater art of the last year in Europe.

• • •

All this week, Mrs. Coolidge has been very much to the fore. She has had a nice little tea party for the women of the cabinet circle and in addition to others groups she received the Council of Bryn Mawr, which held a three-day conference here this week. In this group was none other than Mrs. Frederick Manning, who as Helen Herron Taft, made her debut in the White House. I heard that Mrs. Coolidge was much at home with the Bryn Mawr crowd and that she looked very chic and attractive in a very smart little outfit showing a perfect good hip-length "regularly tailored type" coat, with narrow revere and long narrow sleeves and a straight hanging skirt of the same soft black wool fabric. Her blouse was white—a soft silk effect, also tailored.

Now-a-days everybody's getting a bit excited to know what manner of woman Mrs. William M. Butler is. The wife of the Junior senator from Massachusetts (erstwhile campaign manager for the president), Mrs. Butler is going to be a lot at the White House.

Newcomers bound to "fit in" naturally are Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, Mr. Robinson succeeding his cousin Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., as assistant secretary of the Navy.

He's a Harvard man after the Roosevelt tradition and also rather after the same tradition he's literary to a degree. Just after he got his degree at college he married another Roosevelt—Helen, daughter of James Roosevelt of Hyde Park and granddaughter of Mrs. William Astor.

True to the traditions of the G. O. P., the clans are gathering and those who know "what's what" predict a brilliantly interesting four years with the Coolidges in the White House and the G. O. P. cohorts in town with "lots of money" and the will to spend it.

Fashions of the Day from Bluem's

It's dressup time in Lima and vicinity—time indeed to give thought toward what you are going to wear during the holiday parties and dances. This year evening frocks have many moods—the sheath-like silhouette, the bouffant model and a slight return to the draped evening dress. Beading again comes to the fore. Gowns richly beaded in crystal, diamentees or entirely studded in pearls do not dim the stateliness of plain velvets, the shimmer of snowy satins and the gorgeousness of gold and silver cloths and laces. Chiffon proves a favorite with the younger set.

Dresses, though invariably straight, in many instances flare from the knee down or even lower, a hem flare often being apparent. Tiered effects of metallic laces and silk or beaded fringes are another means of achieving fullness. Necklines vary. The diagonal decolletage attracts most attention tho square necks, V shapes, bateau and rounded lines and camisole tops are all represented. Feather borders flutter from hems frequently. Pearls claim fashion distinction in their own right—because they enhance the beauty of any woman. The newest mode-tinted pearls have fairylike charm. In this day of matching costumes, evening apparel is not immune. Evening wraps unite in color with frocks by means of a shoulder flower, a bright lining or fur trimming. Head-bands of rhinestones and pearls are important accessories though many women prefer the sleek, shingled head without adornment. Ear-rings when they match the necklace are fashion-right and shoulder flowers are quite as necessary on the gown as on the fur collar of the wrap. At the Metropolitan Premiere the Spanish shawl as an evening wrap was most important. "Aida," in all its glory could not dim the magnificence of an audience unparalleled since the war. Velvet wraps proved almost as popular as the resplendent Spanish Shawl. Sumptuous was the display of regal ermine wraps collared in snowy ermine or fox and lined with metal cloth. At least half of the Grand Tier wore long white kid gloves, usually covering the elbow. Flowers, orchids especially, nestled on many shoulders.

Ombre (shaded) effects seem to touch almost every brand of fashion—evening dresses and scarfs especially, though we hear that shaded lingerie will be quite "the thing" for spring.

The envelope Hand Bag still pursues its successful path. The holiday season will find many new and interesting interpretations. Oddly shaped Beaded Purses have indescribable charm. One must see them to fully appreciate their exquisite beauty.

LIVING AS IF YOU WERE TO DIE TONIGH

The Man Who Learns to Become Superior to His Natural Responses--A New Aristocracy of the Emancipated as Conceived by T. J. Gallup

Impulse Which Becomes a Demon, if Allowed to Run Wild in a Wild Mind—Refusing to Be a Slave to "Reactions"

EDITOR'S NOTE: Taking the medium of Thomas J. Gallup, of Gallup Food Stuffs, Inc., to express his personal views on the meaning of life, Mr. Tarkington here continues the signal series of articles which represent the fruits of many years of writing and thinking.

The character, Gallup, a dynamic rich man, who has been too busy to get married, or even to live, is convalescing from an operation in a hospital, and he discusses the reflections that now come to him with Dr. Parsloe, his physician. Miss Cropsey, his attractive nurse, is a third character in the setting. Gallup, after taking his first chance for meditation in twenty-five years, finds himself wondering what everything is all about, and comparing man to a bug, he decides that the same urge—the urge to happiness—drives them both. Yet with the sought-for end achieved, it does not seem to be happiness after all. Which leads Gallup to the conviction that life, with its menace of tragedy, is rather thin ice.

BY BOOTH TARKINGTON

BOOTH TARKINGTON

"LIFE is pretty thin ice," repeated the importantly successful millionaire, Thomas J. Gallup, to his physician. "In our youth we go sliding over the surface, laughing; we see it give way under people in the distance; we hear them cry out faintly and disappear; but that can't really happen to us, we think; and we sing as we go. Then afterwhile, the ice gets thinner, and most of our comrades who began sliding with us have fallen thru—some of them startlingly near us.

"Well, we still slide on, while the ice gets thinner and thinner under us, and we realize it can't support us much longer—and the only singing and laughter we hear is from far behind us, where the young people haven't found out how thin the ice is and how obscure the dark water underneath."

The doctor laughed. "I'm to understand that this is optimism, am I? Might we call it the optimism of a gloomy convalescent?"

"Call it the optimism of a man whose convalescence has given him his first opportunity to think about anything important since he started in business. But optimism it certainly is."

OUT OF SOMEWHERE

"My hearing must be peculiar," Parsloe said, affecting puzzlement, "If what you've been saying is cheering and hopeful—"

"You've heard only part of it," the patient interrupted. "If you'll be quiet a few minutes I'll show you the optimism in it."

"By all means! I'm quiet already. Go ahead."

"This is how the thing appears to me," Gallup said, staring thoughtfully before him at the blank gray wall of the hospital room. "Sometimes we say we come out of 'nowhere' into this world; but that only means we don't know where we come from. We may have come out of somewhere and we may go elsewhere when we die—we can't properly say we come out of nowhere and go nowhere. We come out of the unknown and presently we pass on into the unknown.

"Well, in the interval between these two unknown conditions we are in the condition we call 'life.' And in this condition—while we're what we call 'alive'—we find ourselves inescapably occupied in trying to be happy. That is, we are always in action of some kind of other, trying to get to be happier than we are. We haven't got any power to choose whether or not we'll be in such action or not.

THEOLOGY AND OPTIMISM

"The mind of any man never stops working, even in the most sluggish forms of insanity; and there's no sleep without dreams. You waken anybody from his deepest sleep and ask him what he was dreaming; you'll always find he was dreaming. So our life is all action, either mental or physical, or both; and this lifelong action is our search for happiness; and we have no choice in the matter.

"Well, what's to be done about it? Of course this question means: Can we do anything about it? It's in the answer to this question that I claim to be an optimist about our life. In fact, I think it rests in any man's answer to that question whether he's an optimist or a pessimist."

"I used to hear that a fellow's answer to your question determined whether he was a Methodist or a Presbyterian," the doctor observed cheerfully, "You might explain further for my enlightenment, perhaps."

"I'm not going into theologies," Gallup said. "The theologies are going into themselves, nowadays, editing and even reversing their old forms, and a plain man can't tell much about 'em till they get settled down again—tho of course he can agree with 'em on the main facts they all agree on."

A MONKEY ON A STRING

"But what I was saying: it seems to me a man is a pessimist about life if he sees himself as without the power of choice between good and evil; which is to say he believes he has no choice between wisdom and folly, or in any matter whatever. He believes himself a mere Jumping Jack—an automaton produced by evolution—or, in other words, by our 'old friends heredity and environment.' All he possesses, he thinks, is the consciousness of his own acts. He knows what he does, he admits, but he doesn't do it. He's just a Monkey on a String. Isn't it preposterous!"

"I'm not so sure it's preposterous," Parsloe objected. "I think there are some rather logical arguments for that point-of-view."

"Of course there are," the patient agreed promptly. "There are logical arguments for almost any point-of-view. I remember a logical argument I made to my grandmother when I was sixteen. I absolutely proved my case to her by irresistible logic; and yet she was stubborn. 'Look here, grandma,' I said,—'Do you deny that what I've been saying is logical?' 'No,' she said. 'It's perfectly logical, but as it happens, also, perfectly unreasonable, also, you're wasting my time!'

"I've always been on my guard against logic since then, and whenever logic wasn't reasonable I've been sure it wasted my time. But I'll admit some people in this world are mere Jumping Jacks, if you like. I'll even admit that most of us are only automatons at certain times. In fact, I'll admit that all of us are Monkeys-on-the-String unless we detach the string ourselves."

"I don't follow you, Gallup."

GROWN PEOPLE AS CHILDREN

"I was speaking a little vaguely, I guess," Gallup said. "I suppose the actions of most children are no more than hereditary responses to the conditions that surround them. For instance, give a seven-year-old descendant of selfish people a bag of candy, and he won't pass it around among his playmates; he'll try to sneak off alone with it—a purely Monkey-on-the-String movement of his; he can't help doing it. Well, we know that a great many grown people aren't much more than somewhat experienced children.

"A lot of grown up and 'educated people remain all their lives in the condition of being merely responding to their surrounding conditions in a hereditary manner;—they're automatons. For instance I think I've been one myself, most of my life. I think I was a Monkey-on-the-String up to the day you came into my office and sent me up to the hospital. But since I've been here I've concluded that I don't have to be one."

"How's that?"

"It's like this," said Gallup. "All those years that I was building up my business, I was going on automatically obeying the 'urge to happiness.' I sacrificed everything else to it,—you've shown me pretty plainly that I sacrificed my health to it, for instance. Also, I sacrificed what might have been very pleasant, a domestic life. Here I am at forty-five, an old bachelor with servants instead of children. Until now I've been just a hurrying slave of an 'urge'.

DIRECTION OF WILL

"True, I was responding to the impulse or progress; but I didn't understand the 'urge,' or myself, or what I was really doing. Now I've been thinking for the first time and I've concluded that a man can be superior to his natural responses,—that he can emancipate himself from what we're nowadays so fond of calling his 'reactions'."

But here the doctor's indulgent smile became more amused at the same time that it became more skeptical. "How can a man do that?" he asked.

"By using his mind to get some understanding of himself," Gallup answered. "And then by using his understanding to direct his will. Long ago I read somewhere that the truly wise man is one who can look down with serenity upon the mastered demons in his own soul."

"Would you call the 'urge to happiness' a demon, Gallup?"

"It might be one, so far as an individual is concerned, yes—if let to run wild in a wild mind," Gallup said thoughtfully. "It's rather likely to be a demon in young minds, sometimes—particularly in wild young minds. In naturally noble minds it can be an angel, of course. But what I'm talking about is the possibility of our using it advantageously. It's a universal force and we oughtn't to rest content with being merely haltered to it and jerked along helter-skelter by it, with sometimes our heads in the dirt and our heels in the air.

AN UPPER STRATUM

"After thousands of years we began to notice that something might be done about electricity, you know. We weren't content to let it go on doing nothing but tear down and burn up houses and trees. Well, the 'urge to happiness' is a much more important force, to us, than electricity is; but I don't mean that Mr. Marconi should be trying to box it up and send it by parcel post to customers. I mean that very man should study what the 'urge' does to himself and how he can direct its effect upon him. he has the choice between what we call 'good' and what we call 'evil', and between wisdom and folly.

"He can't choose until he can look down upon himself from the heights of understanding, and observe his own 'reactions' and refuse to be bound by the demons among them. He can't have choice so long as he's only a slave to the old 'urge,' of course. That's what I was for years, but now I've decided that henceforth I'm going to belong to the upper classes."

"What are you talking about now?" Parsloe inquired, frowning. "You're not going to found a new aristocracy, are you?"

"It already exists," said Gallup. "It has existed for several thousands of years, probably. I know how fond we all are of classifying our fellowmen and that the classification is usually only a flattering definition of the classifier. The French noble used to see only two kinds of people, 'I's' and the mob. To the Catholic of the Sixteenth Century there were in the world only Catholics and heretics. To the modern bureaucrats of Russia there are only laborers, capitalists and bourgeoisie. To Mohamedans there exist only themselves and the eternally damned, consisting of all the rest of us.

THE GREAT WHIP

"Well, I've got as much right as anybody else to make my own classification and put myself in the top class; and so, lying here and thinking it over, I've concluded that I see but two kinds of people in the world, an upper class and a lower class. The lower class tremendously outnumbers the upper, and in it there are all kinds of people except one. There are 'good' and 'bad' in it. Catholics, Protestants, Mohamedans, millionaires, Bolsheviki, kings, commoners, saints and thieves and politicians. The upper class is the small artistocracy of the world. I've just decided to join it."

"Then admittance is optional is it?" Parsloe laughed. "Anybody who'd like to belong to your aristocracy can join if he wants to?"

"Yes, certainly," Gallup answered. "Admittance is optional. The lower class consists of all the great masses who blindly obey the 'urge to happiness.' Their movement is forward, but the progress of the slaves is tumultuous and anguished. The great whip, lashing across the universe, has the mob on the march; but the matchless trample onward, jostling and howling.

"The upper class consists of men who have said to themselves: 'Let us consider this whip. Let us consider our relation to it. Some of us died into a by-path yesterday, thinking the whip meant to drive us there; and presently the lash fell upon us sharper than ever. Those who died on by that way went into a more and more furious lashing until they fell and perished. Some of us took the hint and got out of that bypath. We infer that the whip means to direct us; and that when we are wise enough to understand its intentions we shall no longer feel the lash.

OTHELLO AND DESDEMONA

"In the meanwhile, having studied the hints of the whip in the matter of certain bypaths, we need not be slaves rushing blindly under the goad but may march with some dignity as thoughtful men studying the direction intended by the 'Director.' To be more definite, take the case of a jealous man. 'My only escape from this torture is to avenge myself upon the faithless one,' he says. That is, vengeance will bring him nearer happiness. Then he walks in and smothers Desdemona—and finds himself so much farther from happiness that he destroys himself, perishing under the redoubled blows of the whip in a blind alley.

"But suppose this poor Othello had been one of my aristocracy. He would have considered himself and his fury thoughtfully. He would have said to himself: 'I observe a passion of jealousy burning within me. It would drive me to do murder if I let it. But I have observed that murder is never a successful step toward happiness, but is rather a movement in the opposite direction.

"'Moreover, all the minor actions prompted by jealousy bring but greater pain. I have my choice. I can act upon the urgent promptings of my jealousy, which are very sharply insisting that I obey them, or I can choose to do that which my observation tells me would be, in the long run, the course intended by the urge to happiness.' Having said this to himself, an Othello of my upper class would decide neither to do murder nor to act in any manner upon the promptings of jealousy."

DOMINATED BY PIE

"I see your point," said the doctor. "But I don't see that Othello had any choice in the matter, since you imply that if he sees both good and evil before him he's sure to choose the good."

"No; the choice is always there," the patient returned. "I have a friend who eats pie at midnight tho he absolutely knows it will make him sick in the morning. What I said was that an Othello who belonged to my aristocracy would have looked down thoughtfully upon his jealousy and would have chosen not to be governed by it. In fact, an Othello of my aristocracy would never have married Desdemona at all. He would have said to himself: 'I observe that I am passionately in love with this lady, but the difference in color will eventually be disastrous. I will return to Morocco.'

"The upper class of people, as I see the world, consists of those whose understanding gives them the choice between good and evil and who choose the good. The lower class is all the rest of the people. That's my optimism, doctor. I believe that there is an option in life for those who take thought to perceive it. They can choose which class to join."

"And you've decided to belong henceforth to the elect few," the doctor said, as he rose to go. "That's good. But how do you propose to set about it?"

A RULE OF CONDUCT

"I'm not sure," Gallup said. "I did evolve one rule of conduct, tho. I didn't evolve it in my thinking since the operation. It 'came to me,' as we say, on the drive out to the hospital after you told me what had to be done to me."

"What was it that came to you?"

"I made up my mind, Gallup said slowly;—"I made up my mind that if I ever got well again I'd start in every morning and live thru the day exactly as if I knew I had to die that night."

"The doctor laughed. "You were more apprehensive than you looked, I see! But would following that rule admit you to the aristocracy?"

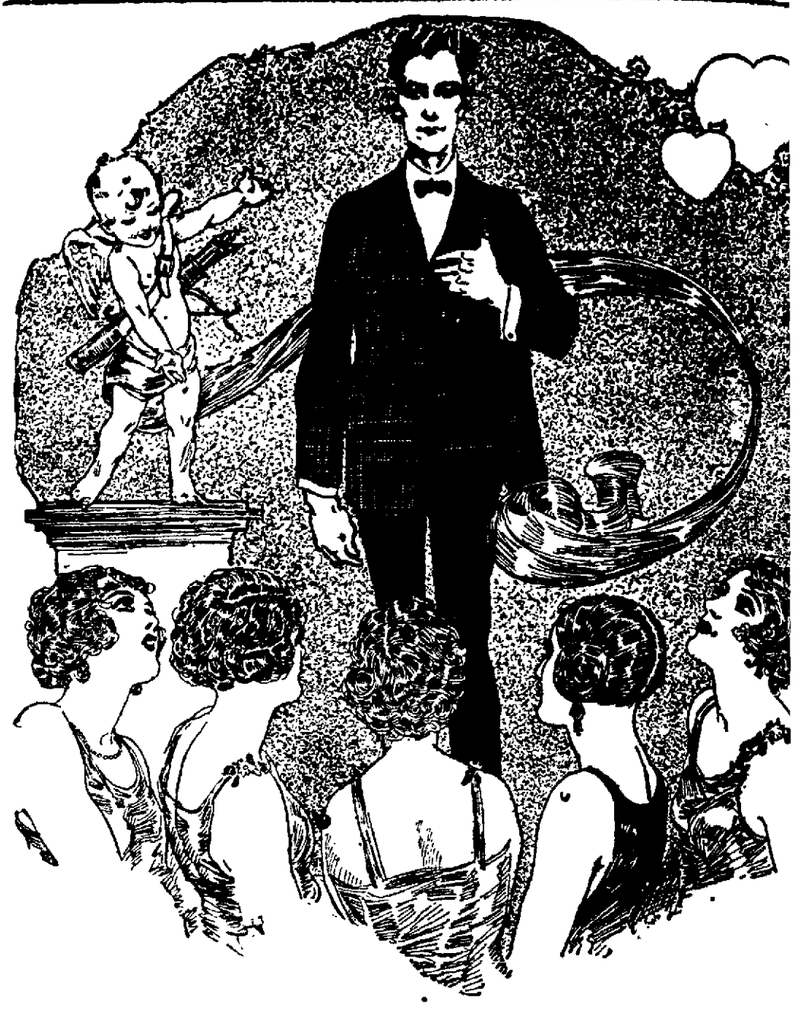

"I'm not quite sure," said the convalescent. "I'll think it over before you come in tomorrow. I'll try to tell you then."

A LASTING LOVER

Bony Type of Man Is Firm, Strong a Good Worker and a Faithful Husband, Experts Say

The most lasting lover in the world is the bony type of man. He is long in long in proposing, long in ceasing to love, and long in life.

We do not call him bony because he is thin, but because his bones are large. are more prominent in his make-up than muscle, ligaments or fat.

Bones represent the strongest, longest lived part of man. An excess of bone body makes for firmness, love of principle, scientific mental interests, hard work, habits, punctuality and lack of showiness.

Such men, if of a physical type, do our farming, our mining, or production with metals and bricks.

If they are of a mental type they are smaller in hands and feet, higher in head, and less awkward and slow in the walk than the physical type of beny man.

The lover with square, prominent bones loves the established, conventional life. He doesn't care for dancing, parties or social life.

If you are looking for devotion without flashiness, love that does not change with moods, freedom from financial worry in your old age, look more than once at the lover with prominent bones and little muscle.

If he is a physical worker he writes us devotion in stability and hard work. He doesn't consider petting his work in life. If he is very mental and quick, he writes us poetry, and gives us books to read.

Nature plays him a cruel trick, and gives him for an affinity a round-faced, plump girl who will not study, but prefers to go to parties and theatres. Their misunderstandings are many.

Nature plays with us for a purpose in our love-making. Let us watch her ways closely. When we are smart enough to study her ways, we will no longer be played with.

Dear Susie Smart.

I am a young married woman of 25 and I sometimes believe that our married life is going on the rocks. It is all being caused by the fact that we cannot agree of the evening at home and pleasures with one another. When I want to go out in the evening my husband is always too tired, but I have noticed that he is never too tired to go out to bowl twice a week. And if I go to a bridge club, he has to talk about "these women who run around without their husbands."

Sometimes I think that the old question of evenings in or evenings out causes more matrimonial woe than anything else under the shining sun. There are some men, in fact many men, who are more anxious to go out in the evening, than their wives who have stayed home all day to have the house cheery for the husband. But, as a general rule, the women complain that their husbands come home at night too tired to budge from the home in the evening. Then the wife becomes weary and wants to go out to the movie or dance and wants to see what other women are wearing. Then what happens? You have sympathy for both. You want the husband to snuggle in a comfortable chair, enjoy the sport page, smoke his pipe and trot off to bed about 10:30 o'clock, ready for his task the next day.

On the other hand you want the wife to dab on some vanishing cream and powder, get on her best hat and coat and go off proudly on the arm of her husband to see what the world is doing that night and come home refreshed for her task indoors.

There really seems to be no solution for the problem but the husband and wife must play fair on a 50-50 basis, realizing the situation. I think it is a good idea to cultivate some pleasures away from one another. I have no patience with a wife who nags her husband because he goes to gym or to bowl or some purely masculine place occasionally. And I also have no patience for a husband who can't see the pleasure in his wife's bridge playing.

* * *

Dear Miss Smart.

I have often noticed that women have written you telling that their husbands mistreat them. Only once did my wife nag me and I beat her. Since then she has been very meek and humble and my word is law. I'm sure that you will find many men agree with me that women should know their places.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Yours is a voice from the dark ages. Don't you realize that this is the age of economic freedom for women? They don't have to stand for that kind of treatment. With so many openings in the business world for women, she can walk out of your home and take very good care of herself. I am glad there are only a few of your kind left. Not that I approve of nagging but there are other ways of handling a nagger.

Dear Miss Smart:

Will you kindly print a formula for a good lotion for the hands? Mine are red, but not always chapped. Then, too, they are always cold. Do you think this is due to poor circulation? M. P.

Equal parts of camphor and glycerine with three drops of carbolic acid to two ounces of mixture, is an exceptionally good lotion for the hands. Poor circulation is probably the cause of your hands being cold. I would suggest that you consult your physician on this.

* * *

Dear Susie Smart.

Can't a mother ever choose where to spend the evenings? I always go to the shows or places where my husband and daughter want to go. Last night was the first time I ever wanted to go to a lecture and they both said it was foolish for me to go. I went anyway and got so much good and pleasure from it. Shall I go against their wishes or go to the shows that I am sick and tired of. I have always granted their selfish wishes only to see, too late, that I have only made them selfish by always doing for them and asking for nothing back. A MOTHER.

Your family have proven to be very selfish. Perhaps by working right, you may make them see it. If not, go to the things you enjoy, anyway, use a little bit of selfishness when they want you to go with them to the things you do not enjoy so much. But a family enstrangement is too big for any possible object gained.

Too many times a wife's individuality is swallowed by her husband and children. A girl may have ambitions and ideas when she is married but with a dominate husband it is usually necessary to get over this if there is to be a domestic calm. she usually gives in, but the harder the husband tries to keep his wife from the things she enjoys by some selfish whim, the farther she will fly. The more tolerance and freedom he gives her, the closer she usually hovers about him. Trying to dictate the life of even one as near as a husband and wife is often perilous ness.

"CORRIGAN"

by EDMUND SNELL

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Corrigan, proprietor of the great Orang-Putch estate, is bound for Borneo in the little Dutch coasting steamer Haufah. Another passenger on the boat is Mrs. Irene Matheson. Corrigan's great fist fells the brutal first mate, who has been abusing a native woman aboardship. His gallant act is applauded by Mrs. Matheson.

Corrigan and Irene Matheson go ashore at Labuan, and Corrigan learns that her husband is Hope-Matheson, a man of ill-repute thruout Borneo. In the Rest House at Labuan Corrigan shows Mrs. Matheson the little image of a cat, carved in bone. There is only one other cat like it in the world, he says, and that is in the possession of the woman he desires to marry. Just as he is ... Hope-Matheson enters the place drunk and abusive, and threatens to "break every bone" in Corrigan's body. Hope-Matheson takes his wife away and Corrigan remains behind to wait for the next boat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The red sun was dropping over the horizon as the white motor-boat with striped awning swept thru palm-girt islets toward the harbor.

"Jesselton," said Raikes, the owner of the boat, throwing aside an Overseas Edition that was hopelessly out of date.

"Ah!" said Corrigan.

"Guess I shall start back to-morrow."

"As soon as that?"

"Must. Duty calls! Not like you sahibs, you know, that can wander the world's surface at will. Got to keep our noses to the grindstone!"

"Does anyone work in Labuan," inquired Corrigan innocently.

They crept in under the long white jetty and, leaving Raikes' men to shift for themselves, made their way toward the club house on the hill.

Corrigan sat by the veranda rail, staring into the night which throbbed with insect life. The chair opposite him was temporarily vacant, Raikes was bending over a table yarning with a trio of old acquaintances. Sounds of riotous laughter came from the billiard room, the bar emitted one continuous stream of tobacco smoke, a babel of voices, the merry clinking of glasses; a cracked piano thumped doubtful music from an adjacent bungalow. Corrigan caught snatches of conversation, the tag-ends of club stories, fragments of time-worn choruses. Suddenly he sat up listening keenly.

"It's a damn shame," someone was saying. "Wonder she went back to him?"

"Boasts he made her come. No end of a strong will. Been livin' away in Singapore for ages."

"Drinking himself to death," put in a third voice. "Came into my office from the last boat; were his mates, you know. He was pretty blotto at eleven in the morning. Told me some rambling story of his wife and another feller at Labaun, I think it was. Swore he was going to make her pay for it."

Someone whistled softly.

"He'll kill her. I know Hope-Matheson. I've had the pleasure of working for him. He's a hell of a brute when he's roused—and there's not a man living dare tackle him. I saw him lay out a big coolie with the flat of his hand."

A group of men moved away from the window by Corrigan's elbow still talking. Beads of perspiration stood out on Corrigan's forehead. He bent his arms till the great muscles threatened to burst his tunic.

Suddenly, as he sat there, something came from the outer darkness and fell on to the table. He picked it up gingerly and turned it over and over between his fingers. It was a crumpled blue envelope with a hard substance which felt like a pebble, wedged into one corner. He smoothed it out and read, in a trembling feminine hand:"——, Corrigan Esq."

He tore open the envelope and drew out a single sheet of foreign note-paper.

"For God's sake, come to me," he read. "Be prepared for anything.—Irene."

There rolled on to the wooden surface before his startled eyes—the image of a Chinese cat—the exact replica of the one that still rested in the bottom of his pocket.

* * * *

Corrigan's guide had disappeared. He fastened his pony to a post and saw, thru the vast forest of mature rubber trees, the bright lights of a house. Close on twenty-four hours had elapsed since he had received that tragic S. O. S. He prayed to heaven he had not come too late. He smiled grimly as he strode up the steep path, glancing ever to right and to left, with the wariness of a man who is accustomed to walk in strange places alone. Corrigan had no room in his mind for consequences. Cost what it might, he had come to steal the wife of the man none other dared tackle. "From the end of the earth," he had promised her, and Corrigan never broke faith.

Presently he halted and listened intently. There was a noise going on up there that puzzled him. As he started forward again, he knew, rather than saw, that someone was coming toward him. He darted behind a tree, as the dim outline of a swart native swung into view on the path ten yards above him. Corrigan could just make out a conical hat and something the man carried over his right shoulder. He had heard in Perak gruesome stories of Borneo head-hunters. 'When you see a native carrying a sword on his shoulder—take no risks," he had been warned. Corrigan took no risks. He sprang on Hope-Matheson's henchman like a tiger, and knocked him senseless with the magazine of his revolver.

As he emerged into the open land beyond the trees, a gust of smoke swept from a veritable furnace, choking him. Horror-stricken, he saw a circle of fire and in it, like a grim set-piece, the fast-consuming headquarters of Hope-Matheson.

Above the sound of crackling wood and the crashing of falling timbers, he thought he heard a man's voice, singing. The wild song, borne on the breeze that fanned the flames until the roof of dried sago-leaves burst into a sea of leaping fire, grew louder and louder, and, presently, the great form of the planter lurched into view. Like a man in a dream, Corrigan watched him feeding the flames from a petrol can, the very surface of the metal container flecked with tongues of light.

Corrigan caught him by the arm and swung him round to face him. The madman clutched at his coat, but Corrigan got there first. He held a blue barrel under Hope-Matheson's nose.

"Out with it, you hell-hound," he shouted, his head thrust forward. "What have you done with her?"

The planter's glassy eyes surveyed him from head to toe.

"D'you know who you're talking to?" he demanded drunkenly, waving one arm like a pump-handle. "Because, if you don't, I'll tell you."

Corrigan beside himself struck him several times in the chest.

"Quick," he almost screamed. "Where is she?"

"She—Oh!—Irene?" A cunning look came into his eyes. "Your'e a trifle too late, old son" he said. "Behold! Her funeral pyre!"

"My God," cried Corrigan and plunged in thru the doorway, under an archway of fire. He heard the maniac shouting incoherently after him, heard him empty his revolver into the inferno. He found a bedroom. It was unoccupied, but he dipped a towel into a water jug and knotted it behind his head. In a third apartment, where the blazing roof showered glowing fragments he found her, bound hand and foot. The terror faded from her eyes as she recognized him, even before he had torn the towel from his head. He soaked it again and fastened it round her, then bore her, like a doll, thru the tottering ruin into the outer air beneath the stars.

The roof crashed in behind him and a furnace, in which no living thing could survive, roared to the heavens.

Corrigan, gulping for breath, carried her beyond the zone of the conflagration. He cut her bonds, drawing the rope gently from the raw wounds it had made at her wrists and ankles. With the moistened towel he extinguished those portions of their clothing in which the fire had taken hold.

"I might have guessed you had that cat," he said simply, for all the world as if nothing unusual had happened. "She wasn't a fortune-teller, that Dusun girl; she was a thought reader! I believe now that I loved you when I first set eyes on you, only circumstances had made me blind. She gave you that little bone thing while I was in my cabin!"

Irene Matheson nodded. As she looked up at him, resting on both her hands, Corrigan thought he had never seen anyone so beautiful in all his life before.

"She was a thought reader, Corrigan," she said. She had never heard his other name.

Corrigan looked. He saw a small head on giant shoulders hang for a moment, twitching convulsively, grotesquely, in the very center of the inferno—then pitch forward into the blaze.

* * *

She looked up at him thru misted eyes. With that firm arm supporting her, she felt as tho she could never be tired again.

"Corrigan's way," she murmured, echoing something he had once said. "You can't beat it!"

An Intimate Story of Innermost Emotions Revealed In Private Letters

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO LESLIE PRESCOTT

Dear Leslie: Arrived here this morning all safe and sound. Went directly to the office and found that Mrs. Atherton had been a regular trooper getting things under way. I imaine that she will be able to leave for Pittsburg day after tomorrow.

The Acme people have been more than kind to me. The president of the company said that he had intended to arrange so that I could become a member of the firm by the first of the year. He was good enough to say that he had never had anyone in his employ that could handle men as well as I. This, of coures, was very flattering to me as it is one of the things that I pride my self on.

Speaking of handling men, I am afraid I am going to have trouble with that cub Condon. You remember I told you of the impertinent way in which he spoke of you and Mrs. Atherton. It seems that he has been roped in by Mable Carter, that woman who was in the papers so much last spring when her husband was tried for murder.

Mrs. Atherton read me today parts of a letter where he asked her to take the woman under her wing when she arrived in Pittsburg.

Mrs. Atherton is quite worked up about it. Of course she declined to do anything of the sort and must have written a very snappy letter to Condon, telling him just what she thought about the matter. In return the woman wrote Mrs. Atherton a letter telling her that Condon had shown her Mrs. Atherton's refusal to have anything to do with her and that it was war to the knife from now on.

Mrs. Atherton is of the opinon that under the circumstances she ought not to go to Pittsburg at all, but I tell her she is crazy, that I would much rather fire the boy than to get along without her. She is worth much more to me in the business.

She seems to lke the young chap very much. Says he was very good to both her and her husband when her husband was recovering from his blindness. She doesn't want to jeopardize his position in the plant and made me promise I would keep him on. I can see, however, she is afraid something will happen that will bring discredit upon him and much scandal perhaps to all of us.

I was for discharging him immediately but she begged me not to do so. Said Condon was most efficient in a business way. This was confirmed by your father who had told me that he had practically run the plant while he was ill.

I hate very much to have Mrs. Atherton start in alone as no one will know what that she-devil will put the boy up to and no one knows better than I what a fool a man can make of himself when he thinks he is in love with a woman.

I did not see mother until noon. She is looking very well indeed, but that damned old maid, Priscilla Bradford, has gotten her all stirred up again.

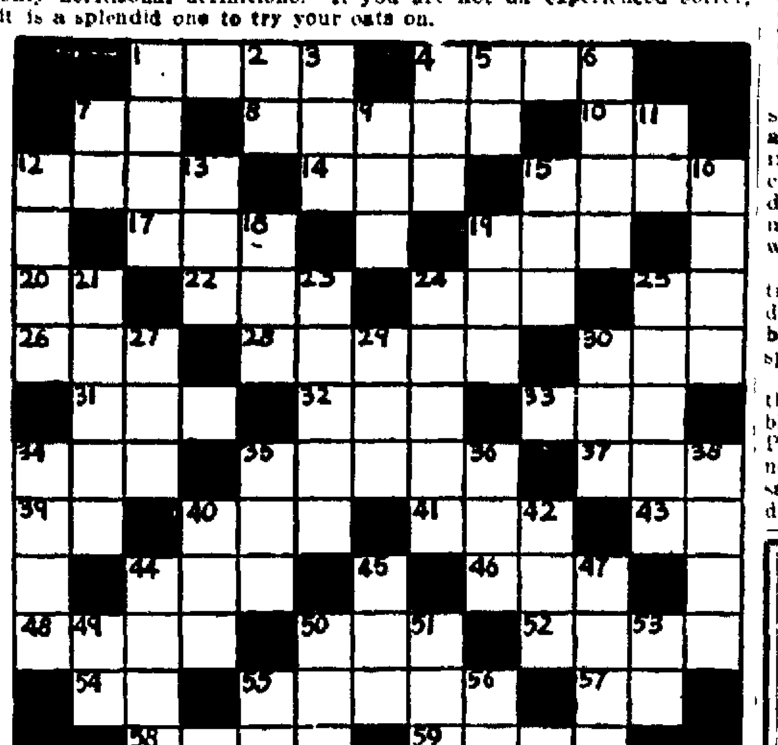

What it is, Leslie, that makes old people's brains incapable of looking on the bright side of things? Mother told me about your letter. Said you practically told her you didn't want her to live with us. She seems to think she ought to come and live in Pittsburg. I'll talk to you about this when I arrive hime.

Liver Trouble Causes High Blood Pressure

Medical science knows that poisonous waste in our bodies would actually cause death in a few days if not eliminated by Nature's processes. Because it destroys these deadly poisons, the liver is our most important organ—the body's wonderful purifier.

The liver prevents the formation of body poisons that cause diseases of the heart, kidneys, blood vessels and are chiefly responsible for premature old age.

When the liver becomes weak, the poisons are sucked up by the blood and health is broken down. Physicians know that the liver cannot be regulated by drugs, but a safe Nature substance has been discovered which will at once increase the vital bile supply. The discovery is purified ox gall.

Get from your druggist a package of Dioxol. Each tablet contains ten drops of purified ox gall. In 24 hours the poison toxins will be removed. Blood purification will begin. Sallow skin will clear. You will feel so much better you will know you have found the cause of your ill health. Dioxol tablets are harmless, tasteless and cost less than two cents each.

These genuine ox gall tablets are prepared only under the name "Dioxol." If any tablet is offered you under another name, refuse it. Accept only Dioxol in the original, genuine package. adv

DIVERSIFIED ATTRACTIONS ARE OFFERED

"Honey Gal" Cobb Presented in "Honeytime" at the New Orpheum

Vaudeville, musical comedy, motion pictures and a musical revue all vie with each other in the Thanksgiving Week programs announced by local theatres.

Diversified attractions will be on tap and theatregoers should find plenty of entertainment fitted to aid them in the digesting of Thanksgiving turkey.

Gallagher and Shean, famous comedians, will be seen here in their new starring vehicle "In Dutch" at the Faurot Opera House on Tuesday evening. This should be one of the best shows of the season.

For the latter half of the week, beginning Thursday matinee the Faurot will offer a feature picture, "Try and Get It" and four acts of vaudeville.

"Honey Gal" Cobb, the comedian who was so popular at the New Orpheum theatre last year, will be seen at that playhouse this week, beginning today in "Honeytime." The show is said to have been written especially for him and to give him opportunity for good work.

Beginning next Sunday the Faurot will offer Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad," a feature motion picture based on the Arabian Nights tales and presented with full orchestra equipment and many other features.

Douglas Fairbanks as the Thief of Bagdad apologizes to a Bagdad merchant whom he has robbed. Scene from the picture "The Thief of Bagdad" at the Faurot Opera house Sunday, Nov. 30, to be here one night only.

DOUG FAIRBANKS

"Thief of Bagdad" Is Faurot Booking

All the thrill and glamour of the 1001 Arabian Nights entertainment will be found to be present when "The Thief of Bagdad" with Douglas Fairbanks is seen at the Faurot Opera House for four days beginning Sunday, Nov. 30, with the matinee performance.

No expense has been spared to make this production one of the very best possible and every trick of the trade has been exercised in the making of the various scenes.

Even tho this were not so the picture would still be deserving of special comment because of the presence of Douglas Fairbanks. This popular screen artist never fails to please in his particular type of drama and, as well may be supposed, this play gives him greater opportunity than ever before.

All the magic splendor of the Arabian Nights has been transferred to the silver sheet and such wonderful articles as the Magic Carpet, The Cloak of Invisibility, the gigantic spider and dragon, the Cavern of Enchanted Trees, The Crystal Realm, the Magic Rope and so on almost without end will be revealed during the presentation of the picture.

Besides the picture itself there will be features of exceptional interest. A symphony orchestra, scenic and stage effects, Arabian musicians and a Mohammedan Prayer Man will be among those assisting in the presentation here.

All in all this picture should be one of the most entertaining to be presented here prior to the Christmas holidays, especially because of the combination of feature motion picture and appropriate settings.

SPARKLING PHOTOPLAYS BRIGHTEN LOCAL SILVERSHEET BILLS

TURKEY WEEK BOOKINGS ARE EXCEPTIONAL

Pola Negri at Quilna; "Flirting With Love" Showing at The Sigma

"Red Lily" Offered by Lyric; Betty Blythe Shown at Majestic

(BY GERTRUDE GILLHAM)

Thanksgiving week brings to the shadow stage devotees a veritable deluge of sparkling and interesting photoplays and if you are a wise and conscientious picture fan you will not want to miss a single program.

Pola Negri has the kind of a role that made her famous—that of a queen of a little kingdom in the Balkans—in "Forbidden Paradise," appearing at the Quilna theatre. It was directed by Ernest Lubitsch, the man who discovered her and introduced her to the American public and has in its supporting cast Rod LaRoque, Adolphe Menjou and Pauline Starke. As its Thanksgiving Day program the Quilna will offer Richard Dix in his new Paramount production, "Manhattan."

"Flirting With Love," an entertaining comedy-drama, featuring Colleen Moore and Conway Tearle, is the Sigma's offering for the first four days of the week. Colleen's role is entirely different from her famous flapper roles. She will be seen as a temperamental little actress of risque comedies while Tearle enacts a hard censor of plays. "Vanity's Price," starring Anna Q. Nilsson, finishes the week starting Thursday. Wyndham Standing plays opposite the star.

A tale of adventure and romance in the Paris underworld, "The Red Lily," holds the screen at the Lyric until Wednesday. Fred Niblo directed the picture which has as its prinoipal players Ramon Novarro, Enid Bennett and Wallace Beery. This will be followed by a new William Fox westerner, "Teeth," in which Tom Mix, his pony, Tony and a wonderful dog have the feature roles.

Betty Blythe and Elliott Dexter are co-starred in "The Spitfire" appearing today and Monday at the Majestic theatre. The two following days will offer Jackie Coogan in "Daddy," "Girl Shy" with Harold Lloyd starts a three-day stay on Thursday.

Appearing until Thursday a the Quilna Theatre.

COLLEEN MOORE

"Flirting With Love" Is Sigma Offering

Flapperdom has lost its greatest exponent, but only for the time being. Colleen Moore, whose incomparable flappering talents made possible the production of such outstanding photoplays as "Flaming Youth" and "The Perfect Flapper" has temporarily forsaken the cause.

The reason is the attractive role of a temperamental young actress she portrays in "Flirting With Love," appearing at the Sigma theatre until Thursday.

Instead of the jazz girl of former pictures, Colleen appears as a temperamental little actress who, like most actresses, is confronted with the problem of holding her audiences by giving up the drama she loves for risque farces.

She becomes famous overnight when she is presented in "The Lost Kimono" but her glory, and the only happiness she has ever known, is shortlived. Wade Cameron, played by Conway Tearle, a professor of psychology, whose hobby is that of chairman of the "Better Plays Committee," closes the show the next day as objectionable.

But Gilda is not temperamental for nothing. In a fitful moment she resolves to give him a taste of his own medicine to teach him what it means to be made a fool of. She pretends to lose her memory and wanders into the home of the reformer, planning to deceive him into believing she is a subject for psychological study and then ridicule him publicly.

Miss Moore's part calls for a difficult type of acting, for thruout the play she really enacts two roles—that of the temperamental actress and that of the amnesia victim, a demure, modest and shy young woman, the antithesis of the blase stage performer.

Starting Thanksgiving Day this theatre will flash "Vanities Price," starring Anna Q. Nilsson. It is described as a powerful drama from the pen of Paul Bern, featuring an excellent supporting cast. It is headed by Stuart Holmes, Wyndham Standing, Lucille Ricksen and Dot Farley.

"Vanities Price" picturizes a topic of absorbing interest, particularly to women. It concerns the difficulties which beset Vanna De Maureier, stage luminary, in her attempt to win again the physical laurels of her youth. She succeeds all too well in her effort, nearly losing her son and estranging all her really good friends in the process.

Appearing at the Lyric until Wednesday.

VAUDEVILLE

Varied Program to be Seen At Faurot

Vaudeville will return to the Faurot Opera House, accompanied by a feature motion picture, for three days only beginning Thanksgiving day. It will be presented at the most popular scale of prices seen at the Faurot in recent years.

The photoplay attraction will be "Try and Get It" with those popular screen stars, Bryant Washburn and Dillie Dove. It has to do with the attempts of a bill collector to obtain payment for an account from an irascible cement manufacturer who also runs a gown and lingerie establishment. Reviewers give it a high rating as a genuine comedy and it has been very well received in the larger cities.

As the headliner of the vaudeville portion of the program, Chong and Rosie Moey will be seen in songs and dances. These two clever Chinese actors will appear in their native costumes in a colorful setting and will give their interpretation of the popular songs and dances of the day. This is an act that is said to be far superior to the ordinary duo of this type.

"On the Highway" is a two-act by Will H. Armstrong and Maudie. The scene is a village garage where the motorist, Miss Maude, goes for assistance. Comedy, songs and dances are featured.

Officer Hyman, "The Real Cop," will be presented in songs and stories of New York City as he saw it during his 25 years on the police force there.

Draper and Hendrie is a Negro comedy act. "The Sheik of Alabam," will be the opening feature of the show which will be seen for Thursday, Friday and Saturday only with matinees each day.

"RED LILY"

Ramon Novarro at Lyric This Week

"The Red Lily," a tale of adventure and romance in Paris, is the current attraction at the Lyric theater and will be followed on Wednesday by "Teeth," featuring Tom Mix and his pony, Tony.

Ramon Novarro has achieved another personal triumph in his new picture, "The Red Lily." He plays the part of Jean Leonnec, a wealthy son disinherited by his father and cast into the underworld of Paris where in the course of time he turns thief. In such a role Novarro is at his best. He appears first in the luxurious surroundings of a palatial home located in a Brittany village, where he has fallen in love with Marise, the daughter of a shoemaker, played with infinite charm and appeal by Enid Bennett. It is this innocent love affair which leads to the eviction of the couple from the town by Jean's infuriated father.

In the scenes in Paris, where the couple lose each other, Ramon appears in the garb of an Apache, and plays this dashing role with the characteristic touches of ironic humor and unexpected flashes of verve which have made him irresistible to audiences everywhere. Enid Bennet as Marise, does some of the best work of her brilliant career.

Tom Mix's wonder horse, and a handsome dog, a great dane, vie with each other in displaying histrionic intelligence in "Teeth," Mix's new westerner which finishes the week at the Lyric, starting on Wednesday. The picture is an adaptation of the popular novel, "Sonny," written by Virginia Hudson Brightman. In the original story, "Sonny" is an airedale that has many hair-breadth escapes. The story is described as "a dog story, a love story and a western story."

In the screen version the sequence and incidents have been slightly changed to allow greater opportunity for Tony, the horse, and Duke, the dog.

Quilna Presents Negri and Dix In Plays

The Quilna is taking special pride in its program for Thanksgiving week, for the two new pictures to be seen at that theatre are among the most pretentious of recent screen hits.

"Forbidden Paradise", Pola Negri's new film, opened Friday for a six day stay and met with the same enthusiastic reception it received in the larger cities. The picture, which is a screen adaptation of Doris Keane's brilliant stage success, "The Czarina" brings Pola Negri back to the eminence she attained in her unforgettable "Passion". The director of the latter, Ernest Lubitsch, is responsible for this new production.

Rod LaRocque and Adolphe Menjou also share in the success of the new picture as members of the cast that is faultless. The reunion of Pola Negri and Lubitsch in an American production is a real event in the film world and it is good to note that "Forbidden Paradise" measures fully up to the mark you would expect from the reputations of star, director and supporting cast.

Richard Dix, long a pronounced favorite, makes his first apearance as a full-fledged star at the Quilna on Thursday where he opens in the much acclaimed "Manhattan."

"Manhattan" is a story of New York with Dix in the role of Peter Minuit, the last of the Minuits, whose great-great-great-grandaffther was the fellow that slipped the chief of the Manhattans $24, a bottle of rum and a couple of blankets and received in return the whole of Manhattan Island. The story, thoroly melodramatic, is relieved with a corking good comedy vein and there is a scrap between Dix and "Gunboat" Smith that is said to be a real "thriller."

Pretty Jacqueline Logan has the leading feminine role and Gregory Kelly, whom theatregoers will remember as the original Willie Baxter in "Seventeen" are supporting players. Other well known players are George Siegmann, Oscar Figman, Edna Mae Cooper and Alice Chaplin.

BETTY BLYTHE

Majestic Will Present "The Spitfire"

"The Spitfire," with Betty Blythe, Elliott Dexter and Pauline Garon in leading roles, is the screen attraction at the Majestic today and Monday. It is a screen adaptation of Frederic Arnold Kumer's popular novel, "Plaster Saints."

The picture tells an absorbing and exciting story of how Jean Bronson, a society girl, living in the palatial home of her rich grandfather, goes upon the stage when she is cast adrift for her refusal to bend to his iron will. The girl meets Horace Fleming, a theatrical man, who admires her beauty and attractiveness and makes violent love to her. She is in love, however, with an honest athletic young man but her grandfather has forbidden them to see each other. Love finds a way, a thrilling way to be exact, in "The Spitfire" and the two lovers are finally reunited after a tustic fight atop a New York skyscraper and many other thrills.

Jackie Coogan appears in "Daddy," which comes to the Majestic Tuesday for a two days stay. Thursday brings Harold Lloyd in his hilariously funny comedy, "Girl Shy."

REVIEW OF NEW PLAYS

Brief Notes Regarding Latest Offerings in New York City

NEW YORK — (By United Press) — The Merchant of Venice "A La France" by Fernan Gemier and his company of French actors, the inevitable weekly play on the "Younger Generation" in the form of a comedy called "New Brooms" by Frank Craven and the equally inevitable "expose" of "Wild Life Among the Idle" as told in "Parasites" were the principal theatre distinctions served New York this week.

* * *

Frances Larrimore starring in "Parasites" had a hard time convincing Manhattan critics that her play laid in Bar Harbor is true to life. While admitting society may at time be a little fast, the critics refused to believe that all the men summering at the exclusive resort spend their time seducing women other than their wives.

* * *

Nepoty's translation of "The Merchant of Venice" brought gasps and exclamations of "so this is Shakespeare" from the audience, who apparently failed to appreciate the French dramatist's liberty with [illegible] and scheme of the Bard.

* * *

An event [illegible] was announced by the Shuberts who will produce a musical version of "The Prince of Heidelberg" in "The Student Prince."

* * *

Frank Craven, actor, author, playwright and sometimes director, seems to be creating as many laughs in his "New Brooms" as he put forth in "The First Year" according to adjective indulged in by a majority of the critics.

* * *

"Rain," after two years on Broadway has finally consented to give the "open spaces" a peep at the life of a fallen woman as played by Jean Eagles and will close its New York run next week.

"TERRE PROMISE"

Harry Roussell has completed "Ya Terre Promise," featuring Raquel Meller, a study of the Polish Ghetto, produced on a lavish scale in Paris. It is reported that Famous Players will handle the picture in France and in the United States.

Billie Dove and Bryant Washburn in "Try and Get It," at the Faurot Opera house, with vaudeville, starting Thursday.

"BIG TIMBER"

William Desmond In Idaho Feature

"Big Timber," to be presented at the Rialto today and tomorrow, is a picture of great scenic beauty. Timber lands in all their grandeur are shown during the filming of the action.

William Desmond is the featured player. He has a real part in the play and will win many more friends thru his exceptional playing.

Laura LaPlante in "The Dangerous Blonde" will be the attraction Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The Wolf Man" will be the attraction for Thursday and Friday and Jack Hoxie in "Western Wallop" will be seen Saturday.

"CHORUS LADY"

And now the chorus girl, or "lady," has been immortalized in pictures. James Forbes' play "The Chorus Lady" has been adapted for the screen. Margaret Livingston makes her initial appearance as a star in this story.

NEW YORK—(By Associated Press)—Heavy buying of Rock Island shares abruptly checked reactionary tendencies in today's stock market and brought about a rate rally which carried a score or more issues to new 1924 peak prices. Called upon to absorb a large volume of realizing sales, the market at the same time withstood a concerted bear selling attack directed against leading issues, which forced general recessions of 1 to 3 points in the first hour of trading. These losses were recovered before the close and prices of all classes of stocks again headed upward. Total sales were 976,000 shares.

PRICE MODERATES

Altho the price of trading moderated somewhat today, total sales in the two-hour session ran close to a million shares, and the sudden burst of activity in the final few minutes delayed the stock ticker by twelve minutes.

On buying credited to banking interests closely affiliated with the Southern Pacific Co., Rock Island common soared four points to 50, carrying with it to new top prices the road's two preferred issues. The buoyancy of these shares stimulated renewed accumulation of other low priced railroad issues. St. Paul preferred mounted 2½ points to 30 and the common touched 17⅞, both within a fraction of the year's best levels. Substantial gains also were recorded by Missouri Pacific preferred, New Haven, St. Louis Southwestern, Colorado and Southern and Pittsburgh and West Virginia, the last three setting new high marks.

Influenced by the recovery in rail shares, numerous industrials resumed their advance which had been checked in the first hour. Early gains of 2 to 3 points in American Can, Dupont, People's Gas, Otis Elevator and Century Ribbon were substantially reduced or cancelled, and slight net gains were general throughout the industrial list at the close.

WILSON RALLIES

One of the best demonstrations of strength was given by the Wilson Packing Co. issues, which responded to reports of progress in reorganization plans. The company's preferred stock rallied 8½ points and the common closed 2⅝ net higher. Gains of four points or more were registered by United Cigar Stores, Stewart Warner and Union Bag and Paper, while Tobacco Products advanced 2½.

Moderate advances in sterling and French francs marked trading in the foreign exchange market.

WHEAT MARKET IS UPWARD

Buying of Future Deliveries is Heavy

CREST IS NEAR CLOSE

Corn Market Shows Strength of Its Own

CHICAGO — (By Associated Press)—Export buying on a big scale carried the wheat market briskly upward today, with prices closing strong 2¼ to 4¼c net higher, December $1.53⅞ to 1.54 and May $1.61¾ to 1.61⅞. Corn finished at 1¼c to 2c gain, oats showing ½ to ¾c advance, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a rise of 27c.

FUTURE BUYING

Export business amounting to 1,750,000 bushels was said to have been done since yesterday's close, and there were indications also of considerable buying of future deliveries here today on foreign account. Revival of active European demand was associated more or less with reports of a wet harvest in Argentina. Price advances here were helped, too, by assertions that the main movement of wheat from the Dakotas and Minnesota had virtually come to an end. Greatly enlarged demand for flour tended further to lift wheat values.

Topmost prices of the day in the wheat market came just before the close, and after an early continuous upward swing from the time that trading began. Most of the day there was a notable absence of selling pressure, and meanwhile more houses were active on the buying side of the market than had previously been the case any day this week. One of the reasons which encouraged buying was apparent likelihood that on Monday a much smaller increase of the United States visible supply total would be shown than has recently been the rule.

Sudden dearth of rural offerings of corn to arrive gave independent strength to the corn market, and did a good deal also to make oats values firmer.

In the provision market, the upward tendency of grain more than counterbalanced the fact that receipts of hogs here this week were next to the largest on record.

PRODUCE REVIEW

PRODUCE REVIEW
By Swift & Co.

Receipts of eggs at the leading consuming markets of the country, Chicago, New York, Boston and Philadelphia, are below the volume moving a year ago. Current production is at a low point, and present prices for fresh eggs will probably continue for some time, at least until there is a material increase in production. Storage eggs are meeting with a ready sale and are moving into trade channels at a satisfactory rate.

The production of butter has now reached a point below that of the same time last year. Continued demand for butter for current use, coupled with lighter supplies, has brought a quick reaction upward and the Chicago market on 90 score standards is higher than at any time since April 1 of this year. While at the present time the market seems to favor sellers, yet any material advance in the market might attract foreign butter. New Zealand, Australia and Argentine seasons are opposite to ours and they are just coming into their flush production.

Receipts of live poultry have been ample for current requirements. A large volume is available for current use, and quotations on dressed poultry are on a somewhat lower basis due to lighter demand and reluctance on the part of buyers to continue to store at the higher prices which have prevailed so far.

Poultry to stand shipping alive to eastern markets or even to dressing sections of the country should be well fed on the farm, otherwise the vitality of the birds is reduced with unsatisfactory results to buyers and dressers.

OIL OUTLOOK IS PROMISING

Better Crude Prices to Bring Burst of Drilling

The outlook for the Lima district and especially the Payne fields is very good for many operators are waiting for an improvement in market condition and as soon as it comes this field will be in for a heavy drilling campaign. There have been a few spots found in advance wells in the new producing sections which are being eagerly sought.

Paulding-co at this time takes the lead in the new developments as the Payne district has attracted some well-known operating companies that will give that section a real testing.

Altho production for United States showed a decrease of 5,876 barrels daily, many districts such as the Oklahoma fields and Gulf coast area reported an increase of 2,000 barrels a day. The decrease came chiefly from the Rocky Mountain region and from California.

Shipments of crude from the California and the Rocky Mountain region is increasing which is a hopeful sign, and consumption in various parts of the country is establishing new high records. Still crude is being put in storage in the country and nothing has occurred to change the opinion of experienced oil dealers.

NEW WELL

Whipple Ulrich and others have just completed their No. 1 Zimmerman farm. This location being due south of their No. 1 well. It is too early to predict just what this well will do after the shot, but it has all the appearances of becoming a reasonably good one.

F. Nelson, working for the Roundhead Oil & Gas Co., is spudding its No. 2, McArthur farm. This should be completed about week after next.

J. S. Rendall, drilling for H. E. Schmidt & Co. on their Val McGuffey farm, No. 1, has been shut down temporarily, but is started up again Saturday. It will probably complete it early next week. This is in the McGuffey district.

The Deem Oil Co. has started its No. 2 on the Rarick property four miles north of Spencerville in the Spencerville oil well district.

The B. Y. J. Oil Co. drilling for E. E. White, will probably move their tools north across the highway for White's next location.

H. Vosler has moved his standard string to his next location for Young & Geschelsen on the W. M. Cook tract, this will be an offset to the Myers well drilled by the same people.

W. B. Jack was forced to skid his rig on the No. 3 well on the Al Long farm. This will delay the completion of this well temporarily.

The Neewly & Cook Drilling Co. are spudding No. 2, Rapp farm which is south of the No. 1 location for the Neeley & Clovish interests.

E. R. Defenbaugh of Coldwater has completed a gas well 600 feet deep. The pressure is very high and it looks like a fine producer.

WHY YOU SHOULD OWN YOUR OWN HOME

Because—The place which is nearest and dearest to your heart should be yours by right and title.

Because—The purchase of it will lead you into saving, prudent habits, which will ever be of priceless value to you.

Because—When you improve your own property, you are building for your own welfare and not a landlord's.

Because—A home is a staple investment, for it brings to its owner both contentment and profit.

Because—It is a place of rest and shelter for you all the days of your life, where your happiest hours will be spent.

Because—You are compelled to buy a house for someone, either for yourself or for your landlord—if you pay rent.

If you have paid rent, for fourteen years you have already bought and paid for two houses for your landlord.

Are You Going to Buy Him Another?
